2Treats of how the necessities of the body should be disregarded and of the good that comes from poverty. Do not think, my sisters, that because you do not go about trying people in the world you will lack food. You will not, I assure you: never try to sustain yourse human artifices, or you will die of hunger, and rightly so. Keep your eyes fixed upon your S for Him to sustain you; and, if He is pleased with you, even those who like you least will giv if unwillingly, as you have found by experience. If you should do as I say and yet die of hu happy are the nuns of Saint Joseph's! For the love of the Lord, let us not forget this: you ha regular income; forgo worry about food as well, or thou will lose everything. Let those whor wishes to live on an income do so: if that is their vocation, they are perfectly justified; but fo do so, sisters, would be inconsistent. Worrying about getting money from other people se thinking about what other people enjoy. However much you worry, you will not make them nor will they become desirous of giving you alms. Leave these anxieties to Him Who can m Who is the Lord of all money and of all who possess money. It is by His command that we His words are true--they cannot fail: Heaven and earth will fail first. [14] Let us not fail Him, let us have no fear that He will fail us; if He should ever do so it will be for our greater good the saints failed to keep their lives when they were slain for the Lord's sake, and their bliss increased through their martyrdom. We should be making a good exchange if we could hav quickly and enjoy everlasting satiety. Remember, sisters, that this will be important when and that is why I am leaving it to you in writing. For, with God's help, as long as I live, I wil remind you of it myself, as I know by experience what a great help it will be to you. It is whe least that I have the fewest worries and the Lord knows that, as far as I can tell, I am more when there is excess of anything than when there is lack of it; I am not sure if that is the Lo but I have noticed that He provides for us immediately. To act otherwise would be to dece by pretending to be poor when we are not poor in spirit but only outwardly. My conscience bad time. It seems to me it would be like stealing what was being given us, as one might s should feel as if we were rich people asking alms: please God this may never be so. Those much about the alms that they are likely to be given will find that sooner or later this bad h lead them to go and ask for something which they do not need, and perhaps from someone than they do. Such a person would gain rather than lose by giving it us but we should cert worse off for having it. God forbid this should ever happen, my daughters; if it were likely to should prefer you to have a regular income. I beg you, for the love of God, just as if I were

CHAPTER 3 Continues the subject begun in the first chapter and persua sisters to busy themselves constantly in beseeching God to help those who work for the Church. Ends with an exclamatory prayer. Let us now return to the principal reason for whi brought us together in this house, for which reason I am most desirous that we may be ab Majesty. Seeing how great are the evils of the present day and how no human strength will quench the fire kindled by these heretics (though attempts have been made to organize op as though such a great and rapidly spreading evil could be remedied by force of arms), it s it is like a war in which the enemy has overrun the whole country, and the Lord of the cou pressed, retires into a city, which he causes to be well fortified, and whence from time to tim to attack. Those who are in the city are picked men who can do more by themselves than with the aid of many soldiers if they were cowards. Often this method gains the victory; or, garrison does not conquer, it is at least not conquered; for, as it contains no traitors, but p men, it can be reduced only by hunger. In our own conflict, however, we cannot be forced t hunger; we can die but we cannot be conquered. Now why have I said this? So that you m sisters, that what we have to ask of God is that, in this little castle of ours, inhabited as it i good Christians, none of us may go over to the enemy. We must ask God, too, to make the castle or city--that is, the preachers and theologians--highly proficient in the way of the Lo most of these are religious, we must pray that they may advance in perfection, and in the fu their vocation, for this is very needful. For, as I have already said, it is the ecclesiastical a the secular arm which must defend us. And as we can do nothing by either of these means let us strive to live in such a way that our prayers may be of avail to help these servants o at the cost of so much toil, have fortified themselves with learning and virtuous living and h to help the Lord. You may ask why I emphasize this so much and why I say we must help better than ourselves. I will tell you, for I am not sure if you properly understand as yet how to the Lord for bringing us to a place where we are so free from business matters, occasio the society of worldly people. This is a very great favour and one which is not granted to th whom I have been speaking, nor is it fitting that it should be granted to them; it would be l indeed, than at any other time, for it is they who must strengthen the weak and give courag little ones. A fine thing it would be for soldiers if they lost their captains! These preachers theologians have to live among men and associate with men and stay in palaces and some people in palaces do in outward matters. Do you think, my daughters, that it is an easy ma to do business with the world, to live in the world, to engage in the affairs of the world, and, said, to live as worldly men do, and yet inwardly to be strangers to the world, and enemies world, like persons who are in exile--to be, in short, not men but angels? Yet unless these p thus, they neither deserve to bear the title of captain nor to be allowed by the Lord to leav cells, for they would do more harm than good. This is no time for imperfections in those wh to teach. And if these teachers are not inwardly fortified by realizing the great importance spurning everything beneath their feet and by being detached from things which come to a attached to things eternal, they will betray this defect in themselves, however much they m hide it. For with whom are they dealing but with the world? They need not fear: the world w them or fail to observe their imperfections. Of the good things they do many will pass unn will even not be considered good at all; but they need not fear that any evil or imperfect thin will be overlooked. I am amazed when I wonder from whom they learned about perfection practising it themselves (for they think they have no obligation to do that and have done qu a reasonable observance of the Commandments), they condemn others, and at times mis indulgence. Do not think, then, that they need but little Divine favour in this great battle upo they have entered; on the contrary, they need a great deal. I beg you to try to live in such to be worthy to obtain two things from God. First, that there may be many of these very lea religious men who have the qualifications for their task which I have described, and that the prepare those who are not completely prepared already and who lack anything, for a single perfect will do more than many who are not. Secondly, that after they have entered upon th which, as I say, is not light, but a very heavy one, the Lord may have them in His hand so t be delivered from all the dangers that are in the world, and, while sailing on this perilous se

4 Exhorts the nuns to keep their Rule and names three things which are importantfor the spi Describes the first of these three things, which is love of one's neighbour, and speaks of th can be done by individual friendships. Now, daughters, you have looke at the great enterprise which we are trying to carry out. What kind of persons shall we have are not to be considered over-bold in the eyes of God and of the world? It is clear that we labour hard and it will be a great help to us if we have sublime thoughts so that we may stri actions sublime also. If we endeavour to observe our Rule and Constitutions in the fullest with great care, I hope in the Lord that He will grant our requests. I am not asking anything my daughters--only that we should hold to our profession, which, as it is our vocation, we do, although there are many ways of holding to it. Our Primitive Rules tells us to pray with ceasing. Provided we do this with all possible care (and it is the most important thing of all) not fail to observe the fasts, disciplines and periods of silence which the Order commands; know, if prayer is to be genuine it must be reinforced with these things--prayer cannot be by self-indulgence. It is about prayer that you have asked me to say something to you. As acknowledgment of what I shall say, I beg you to read frequently and with a good will what about it thus far, and to put this into practice. Before speaking of the interior life--that is, of prayer--I shall speak of certain things which those who attempt to walk along the way of pra necessity practise. So necessary are these that, even though not greatly given to contempl who have them can advance a long way in the Lord's service, while, unless they have the possibly be great contemplatives, and, if they think they are, they are much mistaken. May in this task and teach me what I must say, so that it may be to His glory. Amen. Do not s friends and sisters, that I am going to charge you to do a great many things; may it please we do the things which our holy Fathers ordained and practised and by doing which they name. It would be wrong of us to look for any other way or to learn from anyone else. There things which I will explain at some length and which are taken from our Constitution itself. essential that we should understand how very important they are to us in helping us to pres both inward and outward, which the Lord so earnestly recommended to us. One of these is other; the second, detachment from all created things; the third, true humility, which, althou last, is the most important of the three and embraces all the rest. With regard to the first-- love for each other-- this is of very great importance; for there is nothing, however annoying cannot easily be borne by those who love each other, and anything which causes annoya exceptional. If this commandment were kept in the world, as it should be, I believe it would way towards the keeping of the rest; but, what with having too much love for each other o we never manage to keep it perfectly. It may seem that for us to have too much love for ea be wrong, but I do not think anyone who had not been an eye-witness of it would believe and how many imperfections can result from this. The devil sets many snares here which those who aim only in a rough-and-ready way at pleasing God seldom observe-- indeed, acting virtuously--but those who are aiming at perfection understand what they are very we little they deprive the will of the strength which it needs if it is to employ itself wholly in the of God. This is even more applicable to women than to men and the harm which it does to is very serious. One result of it is that all the nuns do not love each other equally: some inju a friend is resented; a nun desires to have something to give to her friend or tries to make talking to her, and often her object in doing this is to tell her how fond she is of her, and oth irrelevant things, rather than how much she loves God. These intimate friendships are sel [22] to make for the love of God; I am more inclined to believe that the devil initiates them s create factions within religious Orders. When a friendship has for its object the service of

Majesty, it at once becomes clear that the will is devoid of passion and indeed is helping to passions. Where a convent is large I should like to see many friendships of that type; but house, where there are not, and can never be, more than thirteen nuns, all must be friends love each other, be fond of each other and help each other. For the love of the Lord, refra making individual friendships, however holy, for even among brothers and sisters such thin poisonous and I can see no advantage in them; when they are between other relatives, [2 more dangerous and become a pest. Believe me, sisters, though I may seem to you extren perfection and great peace come of doing what I say and many occasions of sin may be a who are not very strong. If our will becomes inclined more to one person than to another (t helped, because it is natural--it often leads us to love the person who has the most faults the most richly endowed by nature), we must exercise a firm restraint on ourselves and not to be conquered by our affection. Let us love the virtues and inward goodness, and let us ourselves and take care to avoid attaching importance to externals. Let us not allow our w slave of any, sisters, save of Him Who bought it with His blood. Otherwise, before we know we shall find ourselves trapped, and unable to move. God help me! The puerilities which re are innumerable. And, because they are so trivial that only those who see how bad they ar and believe it, there is no point in speaking of them here except to say that they are wrong and, in a prioress, pestilential. In checking these preferences we must be strictly on the ale moment that such a friendship begins and we must proceed diligently and lovingly rather One effective precaution against this is that the sisters should not be together except at the hours, and that they should follow our present custom in not talking with one another, or b together, as is laid down in the Rule: each one should be alone in her cell. There must be r Saint Joseph's; for, although it is a praiseworthy custom to have one, it is easier to keep s one is alone, and getting used to solitude is a great help to prayer. Since prayer must be th on which this house is built, it is necessary for us to learn to like whatever gives us the gre help in it. Returning to the question of our love for one another, it seems quite unnecessar commend this to you, for where are there people so brutish as not to love one another whe together, are continually in one another's company, indulge in no conversation, associatio recreation with any outside their house and believe that God loves us and that they themse since they are leaving everything for His Majesty? More especially is this so as virtue alway love, and I hope in God that, with the help of His Majesty, there will always be love in the si this house. It seems to me, therefore, that there is no reason for me to commend this to yo further. With regard to the nature of this mutual love and what is meant by the virtuous lov wish you to have here, and how we shall know when we have this virtue, which is a very gr Lord has so strongly commended it to us and so straitly enjoined it upon His Apostles--ab should like to say a little now as well as my lack of skill will allow me; if you find this explain great detail in other books, take no notice of what I am saying here, for it may be that I do understand what I am talking about. There are two kinds of love which I am describing. The spiritual, and apparently has nothing to do with sensuality or the tenderness of our nature, which might stain its purity. The other is also spiritual, but mingled with it are our sensuality weakness; [24] yet it is a worthy love, which, as between relatives and friends, seems lawfu have already said sufficient. It is of the first kind of spiritual love that I would now speak. It i untainted by any sort of passion, for such a thing would completely spoil its harmony. If it le treat virtuous people, especially confessors, with moderation and discretion, it is profitable; the confessor is seen to be tending in any way towards vanity, he should be regarded with and, in such a case, conversation with him, however edifying, should be avoided, and the make her confession briefly and say nothing more. It would be best for her, indeed, to tell t that she does not get on with him and go elsewhere; this is the safest way, providing it ca without injuring his reputation. [25] In such cases, and in other difficulties with which the de ensnare us, so that we have no idea where to turn, the safest thing will be for the sister to speak with some learned person; if necessary, permission to do this can be given her, and confession to him and act in the matter as he directs her. For he cannot fail to give her so advice about it, without which she might go very far astray. How often people stray through advice, especially when there is a risk of doing someone harm! The course that must on no followed is to do nothing at all; for, when the devil begins to make trouble in this way, he wi great deal of harm if he is not stopped quickly; the plan I have suggested, then, of trying to another confessor is the safest one if it is practicable, and I hope in the Lord that it will be s Reflect upon the great importance of this, for it is a dangerous matter, and can be a veritab source of harm to everyone. I advise you not to wait until a great deal of harm has been do take every possible step that you can think of and stop the trouble at the outset; this you m good conscience. But I hope in the Lord that He will not allow persons who are to spend th prayer to have any attachment save to one who is a great servant of God; and I am quite c not, unless they have no love for prayer and for striving after perfection in the way we try to For, unless they see that he understands their language and likes to speak to them of God possibly love him, as he is not like them. If he is such a person, he will have very few oppo doing any harm, and, unless he is very simple, he will not seek to disturb his own peace o of the servants of God. As I have begun to speak about this, I will repeat that the devil can great deal of harm here, which will long remain undiscovered, and thus the soul that is striv perfection can be gradually ruined without knowing how. For, if a confessor gives occasion through being vain himself, he will be very tolerant with it in [the consciences of] others. Ma His Majesty's own sake, deliver us from things of this kind. It would be enough to unsettle a if their consciences and their confessor should give them exactly opposite advice, and, if it that they must have one confessor only, they will not know what to do, nor how to pacify th since the very person who should be calming them and helping them is the source of the h there must be a great deal of trouble of this kind: I always feel very sorry about it and so y not be surprised if I attach great importance to your understanding this danger.

variant reading of the Escorial Manuscript seems too important to be relegated to a footnot twelfth paragraph of ch. 4 (cf. n. 24) , and deals, as will be seen, with the qualifications an character of the confessor. Many editors substitute it in their text for the corresponding pas will be seen, however, it is not a pure addition; we therefore reproduce it separately. The important thing is that these two kinds of mutual love should be untainted by any sort of pa a thing would completely spoil this harmony. If we exercise this love, of which I have spoke moderation and discretion, it is wholly meritorious, because what seems to us sensuality is virtue. But the two may be so closely intertwined with one another that it is sometimes impo distinguish them, especially where a confessor is concerned. For if persons who are practis that their confessor is a holy man and understands the way they behave, they become grea him. And then forthwith the devil lets loose upon them a whole battery of scruples which pr disturbance within the soul, this being what he is aiming at. In particular, if the confessor i such persons to greater perfection, they become so depressed that they will go so far as to another and yet another, only to be tormented by the same temptation every time. What y is not to let your minds dwell upon whether you like your confessor or not, but just to like hi feel so inclined. For, if we grow fond of people who are kind to our bodies, why should we those who are always striving and toiling to help our souls? Actually, if my confessor is a ho spiritual man and I see that he is taking great pains for the benefit of my soul, I think it will real help to my progress for me to like him. For so weak are we that such affection sometim great deal to undertake very great things in God's service. But, if your confessor is not suc as I have described, there is a possibility of danger, and for him to know that you like him m greatest harm, most of all in houses where the nuns are very strictly enclosed. And as it is thing to get to know which confessors are good, great care and caution are necessary. The give would be that you should see he has no idea of your affection for him and is not told a the devil is so active that this is not practicable: you feel as if this is the only thing you hav confess and imagine you are obliged to confess it. For this reason I should like you to think affection for him is of no importance and to take no more notice of it. Follow this advice if that everything your confessor says to you profits your soul; if you neither see nor hear him any vanity (and such things are always noticed except by one who is wilfully dull) and if yo to be a God-fearing man, do not be distressed over any temptation about being too fond of devil will then grow tired and stop tempting you. But if you notice that the confessor is tendi way towards vanity in what he says to you, you should regard him with grave suspicion; in conversation with him, even about prayer and about God, should be avoided--the sister sho confession briefly and say nothing more. It would be best for her to tell the Mother (Superio does not get on with him and go elsewhere. This is the safest way if it is practicable, and I that it will be, and that you will do all you possibly can to have no relations with him, though be very painful for you. Reflect upon the great importance of this, etc. (pp. 58-9).

CHAPTER 5Continues speaking of confessors. Explains why it is important should be learned men. May the Lord grant, for His Majesty's own sake that no one in this house shall experience the trials that have been described, or find hers oppressed in this way in soul and body. I hope the superior will never be so intimate with th that no one will dare to say anything about him to her or about her to him. For this will temp unfortunate penitents to leave very grave sins unconfessed because they will feel uncomfo confessing them. God help me! What trouble the devil can make here and how dearly peop their miserable worries and concern about honour! If they consult only one confessor, they acting in the interests of their Order and for the greater honour of their convent: and that is the devil lays his snares for souls when he can find no other. If the poor sisters ask for ano confessor, they are told that this would mean the complete end of all discipline in the conve is not a priest of their Order, even though he be a saint, they are led to believe that they w disgracing their entire Order by consulting him. Give great praise to God, Daughters, for t that you have, for, though there are not a great many priests whom you can consult, there other than your ordinary confessors, who can give you light upon everything. I beg every su the love of the Lord, to allow a holy liberty here: let the Bishop or Provincial be approache for the sisters to go from time to time beyond their ordinary confessors and talk about their persons of learning, especially if the confessors, though good men, have no learning; for great help in giving light upon everything. It should be possible to find a number of people both learning and spirituality, and the more favours the Lord grants you in prayer, the mor it that your good works and your prayers should have a sure foundation. You already know stone of this foundation must be a good conscience and that you must make every effort to from even venial sins and follow the greatest possible perfection. You might suppose that would know this, but you would be wrong: it happened that I had to go about matters of con who had taken a complete course in theology; and he did me a great deal of mischief by t certain things were of no importance. I know that he had no intention of deceiving me, or a doing so: it was simply that he knew no better. And in addition to this instance I have met three similar ones. Everything depends on our having true light to keep the law of God pe is a firm basis for prayer; but without this strong foundation the whole building will go awry. their confessions, then, the nuns must be free to discuss spiritual matters with such perso described. I will even go farther and say that they should sometimes do as I have said even confessor has all these good qualities, for he may quite easily make mistakes and it is a p should be the cause of their going astray. They must try, however, never to act in any way obedience, for they will find ways of getting all the help they need: it is of great importance that they should, and so they must make every possible effort to do so. All this that I have to do with the superior. Since there are no consolations but spiritual ones to be had here, I once again to see that the sisters get these consolations, for God leads [His handmaidens ways and it is impossible that one confessor should be acquainted with them all. I assure y your souls are as they ought to be, there is no lack of holy persons who will be glad to advi you, even though you are poor. For He Who sustains our bodies will awaken and encourag light to our souls, and thus this evil of which I am so much afraid will be remedied. For if the should tempt the confessor, with the result that he leads you astray on any point of doctrine slowly and be more careful about all he is doing when he knows that the penitent is also co others. If the devil is prevented from entering convents in this way, I hope in God that he v get into this house at all; so, for love of the Lord, I beg whoever is Bishop to allow the siste liberty and not to withdraw it so long as the confessors are persons both of learning and c a fact which will soon come to be known in a little place like this. In what I have said here, speaking from experience of things that I have seen and heard in many convents and gath conversation with learned and holy people who have considered what is most fitting for th that it may advance in perfection. Among the perils which exist everywhere, for as long as shall find that this is the least. No vicar should be free to go in and out of the convent, and confessor should have this freedom either. They are there to watch over the recollectedne of the house and its progress in both interior and exterior matters, so that they may report superior whenever needful, but they are never to be superiors themselves. As I say, excell been found why, everything considered, this is the best course, and why, if any priest hea frequently, it should be the chaplain; but, if the nuns think it necessary, they can make thei to such persons as have been described, provided the superior is informed of it, and the p such that the Bishop can trust her discretion. As there are very few nuns here, this will not time. This is our present practice; and it is not followed merely on my advice. Our present Ã• lvaro de Mendoza, under whose obedience we live (since for many reasons we have no the jurisdiction of the Order), is greatly attached to holiness and the religious life, and, besi of most noble extraction, is a great servant of God. He is always very glad to help this hous way, and to this very end he brought together persons of learning, spirituality and experie decision was then come to. It will be only right that future superiors should conform to his o since it has been decided on by such good men, and after so many prayers to the Lord tha enlighten them in every possible way, which, so far as we can at present see, He has certa the Lord be pleased to promote the advancement of this to His greater glory. Amen.

7 Treats of the same subject of spiritual love and gives certain counsels for gaining it. It is strange to see how impassioned this love is; how many tears, penances a it costs; how careful is the loving soul to commend the object of its affection to all who it thi prevail with God and to ask them to intercede with Him for it; and how constant is its longi it cannot be happy unless it sees that its loved one is making progress. If that soul seems t advanced, and is then seen to fall some way back, her friend seems to have no more plea neither eats nor sleeps, is never free from this fear and is always afraid that the soul whom much may be lost, and that the two may be parted for ever. She cares nothing for physica will not suffer herself to be attached to something which a puff of wind may carry away so t unable to retain her hold upon it. This, as I have said, is love without any degree whatsoe self-interest; all that this soul wishes and desires is to see the soul [it loves] enriched with b from Heaven. This is love, quite unlike our ill-starred earthly affections--to say nothing of i affections, from which may God keep us free. These last affections are a very hell, and it for us to weary ourselves by saying how evil they are, for the least of the evils which they terrible beyond exaggeration. There is no need for us ever to take such things upon our lips even to think of them, or to remember that they exist anywhere in the world; you must nev anyone speaking of such affections, either in jest or in earnest, nor allow them to be mentio discussed in your presence. No good can come from our doing this and it might do us harm them mentioned. But with regard to the lawful affections which, as I have said, we may hav or for relatives and friends, it is different. Our whole desire is that they should not die: if th heads ache, our souls seem to ache too; if we see them in distress, we are unable (as peo still under it; [27] and so on. This is not so with spiritual affection. Although the weakness nature may at first allow us to feel something of all this, our reason soon begins to reflect w friend's trials are not good for her, and to wonder if they are making her richer in virtue and is bearing them, and then we shall ask God to give her patience so that they may win her m that she is being patient, we feel no distress--indeed, we are gladdened and consoled. If al and gain which suffering is capable of producing could be made over to her, we should st suffering her trial ourselves to seeing her suffer it, but we are not worried or disquieted. I r once more that this love is a similitude and copy of that which was borne for us by the good

It is for that reason that it brings us such immense benefits, for it makes us embrace every believe myself it is important, and it is one of the reasons for the relaxation of discipline in r houses. For this body of ours has one fault: the more you indulge it, the more things it disco essential to it. It is extraordinary how it likes being indulged; and, if there is any reasonable for indulgence, however little necessity for it there may be, the poor soul is taken in and pre about them for fear of annoying them. Sinner that I am! Surely we have not come here to in ourselves more than they! Oh, how free you are from the great trials of the world! Learn to for the love of God without telling everyone about it. When a woman has made an unhappy not talk about it or complain of it, lest it should come to her husband's knowledge, she has great deal of misery and yet has no one to whom she may relieve her mind. Cannot we, the between God and ourselves some of the ailments which He sends us because of our sins? talking about them does nothing whatever to alleviate them. In nothing that I have said am what they said if it helped anyone to live a better life! For when there is one person of this thing generally comes to such a pass that some suffer on account of others, and nobody w will be believed, however serious her ailment. As this book is meant only for my daughters put up with everything I say. Let us remember our holy Fathers of past days, the hermits w attempt to imitate. What sufferings they bore, what solitude, cold, [thirst] and hunger, wha sun and heat! And yet they had no one to complain to except God. Do you suppose they w they were as frail as we are. Believe me, daughters, once we begin to subdue these mise ours, they give us much less trouble. There will be quite sufficient people to see to what yo [37] so take no thought for yourselves except when you know it to be necessary. Unless w up with death and ill-health once and for all, we shall never accomplish anything. Try not t these and commit yourselves wholly to God, come what may. What does it matter if we die have our bodies not mocked us? Should we not occasionally mock them in our turn? And, as it may seem by comparison with other things, this resolution is much more important tha for, if we continually make it, day by day, by the grace of the Lord, we shall gain dominion body. To conquer such an enemy is a great achievement in the battle of life. May the Lord able, that we may do this. I am quite sure that no one who does not enjoy such a victory, believe is a great one, will understand what advantage it brings, and no one will regret havi through trials in order to attain this tranquillity and self-mastery.

17How not all souls are fitted for contemplation and how some take long to attain it. True hu walk happily along the road by which the Lord leads it. I seem now to be beginning my trea but there still remains a little for me to say, which is of great importance because it has to humility, and in this house that is necessary. For humility is the principal virtue which must by those who pray, and, as I have said, it is very fitting that you should try to learn how to it often: that is one of the chief things to remember about it and it is very necessary that it s known by all who practise prayer. How can anyone who is truly humble think herself as go become contemplatives? God, it is true, by His goodness and mercy, can make her so; but she should always sit down in the lowest place, for that is what the Lord instructed us to d us by His own example. [52] Let such a one make herself ready for God to lead her by this wills; if He does not, the whole point of true humility is that she should consider herself ha serving the servants of the Lord and in praising Him. For she deserves to be a slave of the yet His Majesty has brought her here to live among His servants. I do not say this without for, as I have said, it is very important for us to realize that God does not lead us all by the road, and perhaps she who believes herself to be going along the lowest of roads is the hig Lord's eyes. So it does not follow that, because all of us in this house practise prayer, we a perforce to be contemplatives. That is impossible; and those of us who are not would be g discouraged if we did not grasp the truth that contemplation is something given by God, an necessary for salvation and God does not ask it of us before He gives us our reward, we that anyone else will require it of us. We shall not fail to attain perfection if we do what has here; we may, in fact, gain much more merit, because what we do will cost us more labou

If you want to know whether you have made progress or not, sisters, y sure that you have if each of you thinks herself the worst of all and shows that she thinks th for the profit and benefit of the rest. Progress has nothing to do with enjoying the greatest consolations in prayer, or with raptures, visions or favours [often] given by the Lord, the val we cannot estimate until we reach the world to come. The other things I have been describ coin, an unfailing source of revenue and a perpetual inheritance--not payments liable at an like those favours which are given us and then come to an end. I am referring to the great humility, mortification and an obedience so extremely strict that we never go an inch beyon orders, knowing that these orders come from God since she is in His place. It is to this du obedience that you must attach the greatest importance. It seems to me that anyone who d not a nun at all, and so I am saying no more about it, as I am speaking to nuns whom I be good, or, at least, desirous of being so. So well known is the matter, and so important, that will suffice to prevent you from forgetting it. I mean that, if anyone is under a vow of obedi goes astray through not taking the greatest care to observe these vows with the highest d perfection, I do not know why she is in the convent. I can assure her, in any case, that, for she fails in this respect, she will never succeed in leading the contemplative life, or even i a good active life: of that I am absolutely certain. [55] And even a person who has not this but who wishes or tries to achieve contemplation, must, if she would walk safely, be fully surrender her will to a confessor who is himself a contemplative [56] and will understand he well-known fact that she will make more progress in this way in a year than in a great mar acts otherwise. As this does not affect you, however, I will say no more about it. I conclud daughters, [by saying] that these are the virtues which I desire you to possess and to strive of which you should cherish a holy envy. Do not be troubled because you have no experien other kinds of devotion: they are very unreliable. It may be that to some people they come yet that if they came to you it might be because His Majesty had permitted you to be decei deluded by the devil, as He has permitted others: there is danger in this for women. Why d serve the Lord in so doubtful a way when there are so many ways of [serving Him in] safety plunge you into these perils? I have said a great deal about this, because I am sure it will b this nature of ours is weak, though His Majesty will strengthen those on whom He wishes t contemplation. With regard to the rest, I am glad to have given them this advice, which will contemplatives humility also. If you say you have no need of it, daughters, some of you ma it pleasant reading. May the Lord, for His own sake, give us light to follow His will in all thi we shall have no cause for fear.

19 Begins to treat of prayer. Addresses souls who cannot reason with the understanding. It is a long time [57] since I wrote the last chapter and I have had no chan returning to my writing, so that, without reading through what I have written, I cannot remem said. However, I must not spend too much time at this, so it will be best if I go right on [58] troubling about the connection. For those with orderly minds, and for souls who practise pra a great deal in their own company, many books have been written, and these are so good of such competent people that you would be making a mistake if you paid heed to anything you learned from me. There are books, as I say, in which the mysteries of the life of the Lo His sacred Passion are described in short passages, one for each day of the week; there a meditations on the Judgment, on hell, on our own nothingness and on all that we owe to G are excellent both as to their teaching and as to the way in which they plan the beginning of the time of prayer. [59] There is no need to tell anyone who is capable of practising pray way, and has already formed the habit of doing so, that by this good road the Lord will bri harbour of light. If she begins so well, her end will be good also; and all who can walk along will walk restfully and securely, for one always walks restfully when the understanding is k restraint. It is something else that I wish to treat of and help you about if the Lord is pleased me to do so; if not, you will at least realize that there are many souls who suffer this trial, a will not be so much distressed at undergoing it yourselves at first, but will find some comfor There are some souls, and some minds, as unruly as horses not yet broken in. No one can go this way, now that way; they are never still. Although a skilled rider mounted on such a h not always be in danger, he will be so sometimes; and, even if he is not concerned about h will always be the risk of his stumbling, [60] so that he has to ride with great care. Some pe either like this by nature or God permits them to become so. I am very sorry for them; they people who are very thirsty and see water a long way off, yet, when they try to go to it, find who all the time is barring their path--at the beginning of their journey, in the middle and at And when, after all their labour--and the labour is tremendous--they have conquered the fir enemies, they allow themselves to be conquered by the second, and they prefer to die of th drink water which is going to cost them so much trouble. Their strength has come to an end courage has failed them; and, though some of them are strong enough to conquer their sec as their first, when they meet the third group their strength comes to an end, though perhap only a couple of steps from the fountain of living water, of which the Lord said to the Samar that whosoever drinks of it shall not thirst again. [61] How right and how very true is that wh from the lips of Truth Himself! In this life the soul will never thirst for anything more, althou thirst for things in the life to come will exceed any natural thirst that we can imagine here be the soul thirsts to experience this thirst! For it knows how very precious it is, and, grievous it be and exhausting, it creates the very satisfaction by which this thirst is allayed. It is there thirst which quenches nothing but desire for earthly things, and, when God slakes it, satis a way that one of the greatest favours He can bestow on the soul is to leave it with this lon have claimed this as a right. It was clear that they were masters over everything in the wo they had striven so hard to despise it and subjected themselves to the Lord of the world wit

For, despite our efforts, there is always something clinging to the soul, through the influenc further. We are meditating on the nature of the world, and on the way in which everything w end, so that we may learn to despise it, when, almost without noticing it, we find ourselves on things in the world that we love. We try to banish these thoughts, but we cannot help be distracted by thinking of things that have happened, or will happen, of things we have don things we are going to do. Then we begin to think of how we can get rid of these thoughts; sometimes plunges us once again into the same danger. It is not that we ought to omit suc but we need to retain our misgivings about them and not to grow careless. In contemplatio relieves us of this care, for He will not trust us to look after ourselves. So dearly does He l souls that He prevents them from rushing into things which may do them harm just at this t anxious to help them. So He calls them to His side at once, and in a single moment reveals to them and gives them a clearer insight into the nature of everything than they could other many years. For our sight is poor and the dust which we meet on the road blinds us; but in the Lord brings us to the end of the day's journey without our understanding how. The thir water is that it satisfies and quenches thirst. Thirst, I think, means the desire for something very necessary for us--so necessary that if we have none of it we shall die. It is a strange if we have no water we die, and that we can also lose our lives through having too much of water that one's life would end! Can that be? Yes: this love and desire for God can increas as the pain is sweet and pleasant, we think we can never have too much of it. We have a longing for it, [65] and, so far as is possible on earth, we stimulate this longing: sometimes far as to cause death. How happy is such a death! And yet by living one might perhaps ha to die of the desire for it. I believe the devil has something to do with this: knowing how mu can do him by living, he tempts us to be indiscreet in our penances and so to ruin our hea a matter of no small moment to him. I advise anyone who attains to an experience of this fi watch herself carefully, for I think she will have to contend with this temptation. She may r her thirst, but her health will be ruined, and she will involuntarily give her feelings outward expression, which ought at all costs to be avoided. Sometimes, however, all our diligence i is unavailing and we are unable to hide our emotions as much as we should like. Wheneve by these strong impulses stimulating the increase of our desire, let us take great care not to ourselves but to check them gently [66] by thinking of something else. For our own nature r as great a part in producing these feelings as our love. There are some people of this type desires for all kinds of things, even for bad things, but I do not think such people can have great mortification, for mortification is always profitable. It seems foolish to check so good as this desire, but it is not. I am not saying that the desire should be uprooted--only checke able to do this by stimulating some other desire which is equally praiseworthy. In order to myself better I will give an illustration. A man has a great desire to be with God, as Saint Pa to be loosed from this prison. [67] This causes him pain which yet is in itself a great joy, a small degree of mortification will be needed if he is to check it--in fact, he will not always be do so. But when he finds it oppressing him so much he may almost lose his reason. I saw someone not long ago; she was of an impetuous nature, but so accustomed to curbing her what I had seen at other times, I thought her will was completely annihilated; yet, when I s moment, the great stress and strain caused by her efforts to hide her feelings had all but de reason. [68] In such an extreme case, I think, even did the desire come from the Spirit of G be true humility to be afraid; for we must not imagine that we have sufficient charity to bring a state of oppression. I shall not think it at all wrong (if it be possible, I mean, for it may no always be so) for us to change our desire by reflecting that, if we live, we have more chanc God, and that we might do this by giving light to some soul which otherwise would be lost; that, if we serve Him more, we shall deserve to enjoy Him more, and grieve that we have s little. These are consolations appropriate to such great trials: they will allay our pain and we gain a great deal by them if in order to serve the Lord Himself we are willing to spend a lon below and to live with our grief. It is as if a person were suffering a great trial or a grievous sisters to include this subject continually in their conversation. In

might come to Him, just as He also had many mansions. [71] I now repeat this: His Majesty and understanding our weakness, has provided for us. But He did not say: "Some must co others by that." His mercy is so great that He has forbidden none to strive to come and drin fountain of life. Blessed be He for ever! What good reasons there would have been for His me! But as He did not order me to cease from drinking when I had begun to do so, but ca plunged into the depths of the water, it is certain that He will forbid no one to come: indeed us publicly, and in a loud voice, to do so. [72] Yet, as He is so good, He does not force us but enable those who wish to follow Him to drink in many ways so that none may lack comf thirst. For from this rich spring flow many streams--some large, others small, and also littl children, which they find quite large enough, for the sight of a great deal of water would frig by children, I mean those who are in the early stages. [73] Therefore, sisters, have no fea will die of thirst on this road; you will never lack so much of the water of comfort that your th be intolerable; so take my advice and do not tarry on the way, but strive like strong men u in the attempt, for you are here for nothing else than to strive. If you always pursue this det to die rather than fail to reach the end of the road, the Lord may bring you through this life certain degree of thirst, but in the life which never ends He will give you great abundance t you will have no fear of its failing you. May the Lord grant us never to fail Him. Amen. Nov to set out upon this aforementioned road so that we do not go astray at the very start, let us a moment how the first stage of our journey is to be begun, for that is the most important rather, every part of the journey is of importance to the whole. I do not mean to say that no not the resolution that I am going to describe should set out upon the road, for the Lord w bring her nearer to perfection. And even if she did no more than take one step, this alone h that there is no fear of her losing it or of failing to be very well rewarded. We might compa someone who has a rosary with a bead specially indulgenced: [74] one prayer in itself will something, and the more she uses the bead the more she will gain; but if she left it in a box took it out it would be better for her not to have it. So, although she may never go any farth same road, the short distance she has progressed will give her light and thus help her to g roads, and the farther she goes the more light she will gain. In fact, she may be sure that s herself no kind of harm through having started on the road, even if she leaves it, for good r evil. So, daughters, whenever you meet people and find them well-disposed and even attra of prayer, try to remove from them all fear of beginning a course which may bring them suc blessings. [75] For the love of God, I beg you always to see to it that your conversation is b those with whom you speak. For your prayers must be for the profit of their souls; and, sin always pray to the Lord for them, sisters, you would seem to be doing ill if you did not strive them in every possible way. If you would be a good kinswoman, this is true friendship; if y be a good friend, you may be sure that this is the only possible way. Let the truth be in you it will be if you practise meditation, and you will see clearly what love we are bound to have neighbours. This is no time for child's play, sisters, and these worldly friendships, good tho be, seem no more than that. Neither with your relatives nor with anyone else must you use as "If you love me", or "Don't you love me?" unless you have in view some noble end and t person to whom you are speaking. It may be necessary, in order to get a relative --a brothe such person--to listen to the truth and accept it, to prepare him for it by using such phrases him signs of love, which are always pleasing to sense. He may possibly be more affected, by one kind word, as such phrases are called, than by a great deal which you might say ab there would be plenty of opportunities for you to talk to him about God afterwards. I do no phrases, therefore, provided you use them in order to bring someone profit. But for no othe there be any good in them and they may even do harm without your being aware of it. Ev you are nuns and that your business is prayer. Do not say to yourselves: "I have no wish to good," for what people see in you is bound to bring them either profit or harm. People like whom is laid the obligation to speak of nothing save in the spirit of God, [76] act very wrong dissemble in this way, except occasionally for the purpose of doing greater good. Your int conversation must be like this: let any who wish to talk to you learn your language; and, if t be careful never to learn theirs: it might lead you to hell. It matters little if you are consider ill-bred and still less if you are taken for hypocrites: indeed, you will gain by this, because o those who understand your language will come to see you. If one knows no Arabic, one ha a great deal with a person who knows no other language. So worldly people will neither we you harm-- and it would do you no small harm to have to begin to learn and talk a new lang spend all your time learning it. You cannot know as well as I do, for I have found it out by how very bad this is for the soul; no sooner does it learn one thing than it has to forget ano never has any rest. This you must at all costs avoid; for peace and quiet in the soul are of importance on the road which we are about to tread. If those with whom you converse wish language, it is not for you to teach it to them, but you can tell them what wealth they will g learning it. Never grow tried of this, but do it piously, lovingly and prayerfully, with a view to them; they will then realize what great gain it brings, and will go and seek a master to tea Our Lord would be doing you no light favour if through your agency He were to arouse som this blessing. When once one begins to describe this road, what a large number of things said about it, even by those who have trodden it as unsuccessfully as I have! I only wish I c with both hands, so as not to forget one thing while I am saying another. May it please the sisters, that you may be enabled to speak of it better than I have done.

very lips of the Lord. People are quite right to say this, and, were it not for our great weakne lukewarmness of our devotion, there would be no need for any other systems of prayer or books at all. I am speaking to souls who are unable to recollect themselves by meditating u mysteries, and who think they need special methods of prayer; some people have such ing

This is no time for believing everyone; believe only those whom you see modelling the life of Christ. Endeavour always to have a good conscience; practise humility; despise things; and believe firmly in the teaching of our Holy Mother [the Roman] Church. You may sure that you are on a [very] good road. Cease, as I have said, to have fear where no fear attempts to frighten you, point out the road to him in all humility. Tell him that you have a R commands you, as it does, to pray without ceasing, and that that rule you must keep. 22 Explains the meaning of mental prayer. You must know, daughters, that wh no you are practising mental prayer has nothing to do with keeping the lips closed. If, while speaking with God, I have a clear realization and full consciousness that I am doing so, an more real to me than the words I am uttering, then I am combining mental and vocal praye tell you that you are speaking with God by reciting the Paternoster and thinking of worldly things--well, words fail me. When you speak, as it is right for you to do, with so great a Lor that you should think of Who it is that you are addressing, and what you yourself are, if o may speak to Him with proper respect. How can you address a king with the deference du you know what ceremonies have to be used when speaking to a grandee, unless you are the nature of his position and of yours? It is because of this, and because it is the custom t that you must behave respectfully to him, and must learn what the custom is, and not be ca things, or you will be dismissed as a simpleton and obtain none of the things you desire. A furthermore, unless you are quite conversant with it, you must get all necessary informatio you are going to say written down for you. It once happened to me, when I was not accust addressing aristocrats, that I had to go on a matter of urgent business to see a lady who h addressed as "Your Ladyship". [81] I was shown that word in writing; but I am stupid, and h such a term before; so when I arrived I got it wrong. So I decided to tell her about it and s heartily and told me to be good enough to use the ordinary form of polite address, [82] whi How is it, my Lord, how is it, my Emperor, that Thou canst suffer this, Prince of all Creation my God, art a King without end, and Thine is no borrowed Kingdom, but Thine own, and it away. When the Creed says "Whose Kingdom shall have no end" the phrase nearly always particularly happy. I praise Thee, Lord, and bless Thee, and all things praise Thee for ever Kingdom will endure for ever. Do Thou never allow it to be thought right, Lord, for those w Thee and come to speak with Thee to do so with their lips alone. What do you mean, Chris that mental prayer is unnecessary? Do you understand what you are saying? I really do n And so you want us all to go wrong: you cannot know what mental prayer is, or how vocal p said, or what is meant by contemplation. For, if you knew this, you would not condemn on what you praise on the other. Whenever I remember to do so, I shall always speak of ment prayer together, daughters, so that you may not be alarmed. I know what such fears lead to suffered a certain number of trials in this respect, and so I should be sorry if anyone were t you, for it is very bad for you to have misgivings while you are walking on this path. It is mo that you should realize you are making progress; for if a traveller is told that he has taken t road, and has lost his way, he begins to wander to and fro and the constant search for the him, wastes his time and delays his arrival. Who can say that it is wrong if, before we begin the Hours or the Rosary, we think Whom we are going to address, and who we are that are that we may do so in the way we should? I assure you, sisters, that if you gave all due att consideration of these two points before beginning the vocal prayers which you are about t be engaging in mental prayer for a very long time. For we cannot approach a prince and a the same careless way that we should adopt in speaking to a peasant or to some poor wor whom we may address however we like. The reason we sometimes do so is to be found i this King, Who, unskilled though I am in speaking with Him, does not refuse to hear me or approach Him, or command His guards to throw me out. For the angels in His presence kn King is such that He prefers the unskilled language of a humble peasant boy, knowing tha more if he had more to say, to the speech of the wisest and most learned men, however el arguments, if these are not accompanied by humility. But we must not be unmannerly bec only to show our gratitude to Him for enduring our foul odour and allowing such a one as m near Him, it is well that we should try to realize His purity and His nature. It is true that we recognize this at once when we approach Him, just as we do when we visit the lords of the are told about their fathers' names and their incomes and dignities, there is no more for us about them; for on earth one makes account of persons, and honours them, not because o because of their possessions. O miserable world! Give hearty praise to God, daughters, t left so wretched a place, [84] where people are honoured, not for their own selves, but for w from their tenants and vassals: if these fail them, they have no honour left. It is a curious th when you go out to recreation together you should laugh about it, for it is a good way of sp time to reflect how blindly people in the world spend theirs. O Thou our Emperor! Suprem Supreme Goodness, Wisdom Itself, without beginning, without end and without measure in infinite are these and incomprehensible, a fathomless ocean of wonders, O Beauty [85] co Thyself all beauties. O Very Strength! God help me! Would that I could command all the el mortals and all wisdom, so as to understand, as far as is possible here below, that to know everything, and thus to describe some of the many things on which we may meditate in ord something of the nature of this our Lord and Good. When you approach God, then, try [86 realize Whom you are about to address and continue to do so while you are addressing Hi thousand lives, we should never fully understand how this Lord merits that we behave towa Whom even the angels tremble. He orders all things and He can do all things: with Him to w perform. It will be right, then, daughters, for us to endeavour to rejoice in these wondrous q our Spouse and to know Whom we have wedded and what our lives should be. Why, God in this world is about to marry, she knows beforehand whom she is to marry, what sort of a what property he possesses. Shall not we, then, who are already betrothed, think about ou before we are wedded to Him and He takes us home to be with Him? If these thoughts are those who are betrothed to men on earth, how can we be forbidden to discover Who this M Father, what is the country to which He will take me, what are the riches with which He pro me, what is His rank, how I can best make Him happy, what I can do that will give Him plea I can bring my rank into line with His. If a woman is to be happy in her marriage, it is just th that she is advised to see about, even though her husband be a man of very low station. S respect be paid to Thee, then, my Spouse, than to men? If they think it unfitting to do Thee them at least leave Thee Thy brides, who are to spend their lives with Thee. A woman is in in her life if her husband is so jealous that he will allow her to speak with no one but himsel be a pretty pass if she could not resolve to give him this pleasure, for it is reasonable eno she should put up with this and not wish to converse with anyone else, since in him she ha can desire. To understand these truths, my daughters, is to practise mental prayer. If you to understand them, and at the same time to practise vocal prayer, well and good. But do n address God while you are thinking of other things, for to do that is the result of not under what mental prayer is. I think I have made this clear. May the Lord grant us to learn how to practice. Amen.

from the first we should be very resolute, and for this there are so many reasons that if I we them all I should have to write at great length. Some of them are given in other books. I wil just two or three of them, sisters. One is that when we decide to give anything--such as this effort of recollection [88] --to Him Who has given us so much, and Who is continually giving wrong for us not to be entirely resolute in doing so and to act like a person who lends som expects to get it back again. (Not that we do not receive interest: on the contrary, we gain a I do not call this "giving". Anyone who has been lent something always feels slightly displ the lender wants it back again, especially if he is using it himself and has come to look upo own. If the two are friends and the lender is indebted to the recipient for many things of wh made him free gifts, he will think it meanness and a great lack of affection if he will leave no smallest thing in his possession, merely as a sign of love. What wife is there who, after re many valuable jewels from her husband, will not give him so much as a ring--which he wan of its value, for all she has is his, but as a sign of love and a token that she will be his until dies? Does the Lord deserve less than this that we should mock Him by taking away the w [89] which we have given Him? Since we have resolved to devote to Him this very brief per am not prepared to devote it wholly to God. I say "wholly", but we must not be considered back if we should fail to give it Him for a day, or for a few days, because of legitimate occu [90] He does not look at trivial details; and, if you are trying to please Him in any way, He assuredly accept that as your gift. The other way is suitable for ungenerous souls, so mean not large-hearted enough to give but find it as much as they can do to lend. Still, let them effort, for this Lord of ours will reckon everything we do to our credit and accept everything give Him. In drawing up our reckoning, He is not in the least exacting, but generous; howe amount we may owe Him, it is a small thing for Him to forgive us. And, as to paying us, He about this that you need have no fear He will leave us without our reward if only we raise o Heaven and remember Him. A second reason why we should be resolute is that this will gi less opportunity to tempt us. He is very much afraid of resolute souls, knowing by experien is himself the loser. We must not become unwatchful, or count upon this, for we have to do folk, who are great cowards and dare not attack the wary, but, if they see we are careless, great harm. And if they know anyone to be changeable, and not resolute in doing what is g determined to persevere, they will not leave him alone either by night or by day and will sug endless misgivings and difficulties. This I know very well by experience and so I have been you about it: I am sure that none of us realize its great importance. Another reason, very r point, is that a resolute person fights more courageously. He knows that, come what may, l retreat. He is like a soldier in battle who is aware that if he is vanquished his life will not be and that if he escapes death in battle he must die afterwards. It has been proved, I think, th man will fight more resolutely and will try, as they say, to sell his life dearly, fearing the ene blows the less because he understands the importance of victory and knows that his very l his gaining it. We must also be firmly convinced from the start that, if we fight courageous not allow ourselves to be beaten, we shall get what we want, and there is no doubt that, ho gains may be, they will make us very rich. Do not be afraid that the Lord Who has called u this spring will allow you to die of thirst. This I have already said and I should like to repeat people are often timid when they have not learned by experience of the Lord's goodness, putting the matter to the test; for this journey has the advantage [92] of giving us very much 24 Describes how vocal prayer may be practised with perfection and how closely allied it is to mental prayer. Let us now return to speak of those souls I have mentioned wh practise recollection or tie down their minds to mental prayer or make a meditation. We mu them of either of those two things--they will not hear of them; as a matter of fact, there are many people who seem terrified at the very name of contemplation or mental prayer. In ca person should come to this house (for, as I have said, not all are led by the same path), I w you, or, I might even say, to teach you (for, as your mother, and by the office of prioress w hold, I have the right to do so) how you must practise vocal prayer, for it is right that you sh understand what you are saying. Anyone unable to think of God may find herself wearied b and so I will not begin to discuss these, but will speak simply of prayers which, as Christian perforce recite--namely, the Paternoster and the Ave Maria--and then no one will be able that we are repeating words without understanding what we are saying. We may, of course to say our prayers as a mere habit, repeating the words and thinking that this will suffice.

like our own. But what I should like, daughters, is for us not to be satisfied with that alone: the Creed, it seems to me right, and indeed obligatory, that I should understand and know I believe; and, when I repeat the "Our Father", my love should make me want to understan already, and so there is no need for you to think about Him, you are not right; there is a gre difference between one master and another, and it would be very wrong of us not to think a teach us, even on earth; if they are holy men and spiritual masters, and we are good pupils impossible for us not to have great love for them, and indeed to hold them in honour and o about them. And when it comes to the Master Who taught us this prayer, and Who loves us anxious for us to profit by it, may God forbid that we should fail to think of Him often when it, although our own weakness may prevent us from doing so every time. Now, in the first know that His Majesty teaches that this prayer must be made when we are alone, just as H when He prayed, not because this was necessary for Him, but for our edification. It has al said that it is impossible to speak to God and to the world at the same time; yet this is just trying to do when we are saying our prayers and at the same time listening to the convers or letting our thoughts wander on any matter that occurs to us, without making an effort to them. There are occasions when one cannot help doing this: times of ill-health (especially i concentrate; or times when, for their own good, God allows His servants for days on end to Do you suppose that, because we cannot hear Him, He is silent? He speaks clearly to the troublesome at first to practise recollection of the mind when one has not made it a habit. S

CHAPTER 25 Describes the great gain which comes to a soul when it practises vocal p perfectly. Shows how God may raise it thence to things supernatural. In case you should th little gain to be derived from practising vocal prayer perfectly, I must tell you that, while you repeating the Paternoster or some other vocal prayer, it is quite possible for the Lord to gra perfect contemplation. In this way His Majesty shows that He is listening to the person who Him, and that, in His greatness, He is addressing her, [95] by suspending the understandi stop to all thought, and, as we say, taking the words out of her mouth, so that even if she w speak she cannot do so, or at any rate not without great difficulty. Such a person understan without any sound of words, she is being taught by this Divine Master, Who is suspending which, if they were to work, would be causing her harm rather than profit. The faculties rejo that it is rejoicing in the object of its love, yet it does not know how it is rejoicing in it. It is w aware that this is not a joy which can be attained by the understanding; the will embraces i understanding how; but, in so far as it can understand anything, it perceives that this is a b chapter is very profitable for those who are beginning prayer. Let us now return to our vocal prayer, so that we may learn to pray in such a way that, without our you know, the first things must be examination of conscience, confession of sin and the sig of help that if we approach Him humbly and ask Him to be with us He will not grant our req year passes without our obtaining what we ask, let us be prepared to try for longer. Let us time so well spent. Who, after all, is hurrying us? I am sure we can form this habit and striv the side of this true Master. I am not asking you now to think of Him, or to form numerous conceptions of Him, or to make long and subtle meditations with your understanding. I am look at Him. For who can prevent you from turning the eyes of your soul (just for a moment do no more) upon this Lord? You are capable of looking at very ugly and loathsome things then, look at the most beautiful thing imaginable? Your Spouse never takes His eyes off yo has borne with thousands of foul and abominable sins which you have committed against have not been enough to make Him cease looking upon you. Is it such a great matter, ther avert the eyes of your soul from outward things and sometimes to look at Him? See, He is us to look at Him, as He says to the Bride. [97] you will find Him. He longs so much for us t Him once more that it will not be for lack of effort on His part if we fail to do so. A wife, the must be like this if she is to have a happy married life with her husband. If he is sad, she m signs of sadness; if he is merry, even though she may not in fact be so, she must appear what slavery you have escaped from, sisters! Yet this, without any pretence, is really how v by the Lord. He becomes subject to us and is pleased to let you be the mistress and to co will. If you are happy, look upon your risen Lord, and the very thought of how He rose from will gladden you. How bright and how beautiful was He then! How majestic! [98] How victo joyful! He was like one emerging from a battle in which He had gained a great kingdom, all desires you to have--and with it Himself. Is it such a great thing that you should turn your once and look upon Him Who has made you such great gifts? If you are suffering trials, or upon Him on His way to the Garden. What sore distress He must have borne in His soul, to own suffering as He did and to complain of it! Or look upon Him bound to the Column, full o flesh all torn to pieces by His great love for you. How much He suffered, persecuted by so by others, denied by His friends, and even deserted by them, with none to take His part, fro cold and left so completely alone that you may well comfort each other! Or look upon Him the weight of the Cross and not even allowed to take breath: He will look upon you with His compassionate eyes, full of tears, and in comforting your grief will forget His own because bearing Him company in order to comfort Him and turning your head to look upon Him. "O world, my true Spouse!" you may say to Him, if seeing Him in such a plight has filled your h tenderness that you not only desire to look upon Him but love to speak to Him, not using f prayer, but words issuing from the compassion of your heart, which means so much to Him needy, my Lord and my Good, that Thou wilt accept poor companionship like mine? Do I re that Thou hast found comfort, even in me? How can it be possible, Lord, that the angels ar alone and that Thy Father is not comforting Thee? "If Thou, Lord, art willing to suffer all th me, what am I suffering for Thee? What have I to complain of? I am ashamed, Lord, when such a plight, and if in any way I can imitate Thee I will suffer all trials that come to me and as a great blessing. Let us go both together, Lord: whither Thou goest, I must go; through Thou passest, I must pass." Take up this cross, sisters: never mind if the Jews trample upo you can save Him some of His trials. CHAPTER 27 Describes the great love shown us by the Lord in the first words Paternoster and the great importance of our making no account of good birth if w desire to be the daughters of God. "Our Father, which art in the Heavens." O my Lord, how reveal Thyself as the Father of such a Son, while Thy Son reveals Himself as the Son of s Blessed be Thou for ever and ever. Ought not so great a favour as this, Lord, to have com the prayer? Here, at the very beginning, Thou dost fill our hands and grant us so great a f would be a very great blessing if our understanding could be filled with it so that the will wo occupied and we should be unable to say another word. Oh, how appropriate, daughters, w contemplation be here! Oh, how right would the soul be to enter within itself, so as to be th able to rise above itself, that this holy Son might show it the nature of the place where He s Father dwells--namely, the Heavens! Let us leave earth, my daughters, for it is not right tha like this should be prized so little, and that, after we have realized how great this favour is should remain on earth any more. O Son of God and my Lord! How is it that Thou canst giv with Thy first word? It is so wonderful that Thou shouldst descend to such a degree of hum with us when we pray and make Thyself the Brother of creatures so miserable and lowly! H that, in the name of Thy Father, Thou shouldst give us all that there is to be given, by willin have us as His children--and Thy word cannot fail? [It seems that] Thou dost oblige Him to a charge by no means light, since, being our Father, He must bear with us, however grea If we return to Him, He must pardon us, as He pardoned the prodigal son, must comfort us and must sustain us, as such a Father is bound to do, for He must needs be better than a father, since nothing good can fail to have its perfection in Him. He must cherish us; He mu and at the last He must make us participants and fellow-heirs with Thee. Behold, my Lord that Thou hast for us and with Thy humility, nothing can be an obstacle to Thee. And then, been upon earth and by taking our nature upon Thee hast clothed Thyself with humanity: therefore some reason to care for our advantage. But behold, Thy Father is in Heaven, as us, and it is right that Thou shouldst consider His honour. Since Thou hast offered Thysel dishonoured by us, leave Thy Father free. Oblige Him not to do so much for people as wick make Him such poor acknowledgment. O good Jesus! How clearly hast Thou shown that Him and that Thy will is His and His is Thine! How open a confession is this, my Lord! Wh that Thou hast for us? Thou didst deceive the devil, and conceal from him that Thou art the but Thy great desire for our welfare overcomes all obstacles to Thy granting us this greates Who but Thou could do this, Lord? I cannot think how the devil failed to understand from th Thine Who Thou wert, beyond any doubt. I, at least, my Jesus, see clearly that Thou didst beloved son both for Thyself and for us, and Thou hast such power that what Thou sayest be done on earth. These souls have already, as we may say, put out to sea; though they have not sailed quite

satisfying his hunger by seizing whatever attracts him when he sees it? There should surel difference between the brute beasts and ourselves, as we have such a Father. Perhaps y me and say that this is obvious enough; and you will be right, though it was some time befo it. I knew perfectly well that I had a soul, but I did not understand what that soul merited, o dwelt within it, until I closed my eyes to the vanities of this world in order to see it. I think, if had understood then, as I do now, how this great King really dwells within this little palace soul, I should not have left Him alone so often, but should have stayed with Him and never His dwelling-place to get so dirty. How wonderful it is that He Whose greatness could fill a worlds, and very many more, should confine Himself within so small a space, just as He wa dwell within the womb of His most holy Mother! Being the Lord, He has, of course, perfect f He loves us, He fashions Himself to our measure. When a soul sets out upon this path, H reveal Himself to it, lest it should feel dismayed at seeing that its littleness can contain su greatness; but gradually He enlarges it to the extent requisite for what He has to set within this reason that I say He has perfect freedom, since He has power to make the whole of th great. The important point is that we should be absolutely resolved to give it to Him for His should empty it so that He may take out and put in just what He likes, as He would with son own. His Majesty is right in demanding this; let us not deny it to Him. And, as He refuses to will, He takes what we give Him but does not give Himself wholly until He sees that we are ourselves wholly to Him. This is certain, and, as it is of such importance, I often remind you does He work within the soul as He does when it is wholly His and keeps nothing back. I do He can do so, since He likes everything to be done in order. If we fill the palace with vulgar all kinds of junk, how can the Lord and His Court occupy it? When such a crowd is there it great thing if He were to remain for even a short time. Do you suppose, daughters, that He He comes to us? Do you not see that His most holy Son says: "Who art in the Heavens"? S would not be abandoned by His courtiers. They stay with Him and pray to Him on our beha welfare, for they are full of charity. Do not imagine that Heaven is like this earth, where, if a or prelate shows anyone favours, whether for some particular reason or simply because he at once become envious, and, though the poor man has done nothing to them, he is malici that his favours cost him dear.

CHAPTER 29 Continues to describe methods for achieving this Prayer of Recollection. Says what little account we should make of being favoured by our superiors love of God, daughters, avoid making any account of these favours. You should each do yo this is not appreciated by your superior, you may be sure that it will be appreciated and re the Lord. We did not come here to seek rewards in this life, but only in the life to come. Let always be fixed upon what endures, and not trouble themselves with earthly things which even for a lifetime. For to-day some other sister will be in your superior's good books; when if she sees you exhibiting some additional virtue, it is with you that she will be better pleas if she is not it is of little consequence. Never give way to these thoughts, which sometimes as I have said. You will find your Master; He will not fail you: indeed, the less outward comf the [much] greater the joy He will give you. He is full of compassion and never fails those afflicted and out of favour if they trust in Him alone. Thus David tells us that he never saw t forsaken, [99] and again, that the Lord is with the afflicted. [100] Either you believe this or not: if you do, as you should, why do you wear yourselves to death with worry? O my Lord kingdom of Heaven, the chief is that we shall have no more to do with the things of earth; we shall have an intrinsic tranquillity and glory, a joy in the rejoicings of all, a perpetual pea a great interior satisfaction which will come to us when we see that all are hallowing and p Lord, and are blessing His name, and that none is offending Him. For all love Him there an concern is loving Him, nor can it cease from loving Him because it knows Him. And this is love Him on earth, though we cannot do so with the same perfection nor yet all the time; st knew Him, we should love Him very differently from the way we do now. It looks as though to say that we must be angels to make this petition and to say our vocal prayers well. This be our Divine Master's wish, since He bids us make so sublime a petition. You may be qu never tells us to ask for impossibilities, so it must be possible, with God's help, for a soul that state of exile to reach such a point, though not as perfectly as those who have been fr prison, for we are making a sea-voyage and are still on the journey. But there are times w wearied with travelling and the Lord grants our faculties tranquillity and our soul quiet, and are in that state He gives us a clear understanding of the nature of the gifts He bestows u whom He brings to His Kingdom. Those to whom, while they are still on earth, He grants w it, for I know there are many people who practise vocal prayer in the manner already descr raised by God to the higher kind of contemplation without having had any hand in this them knowing how it has happened. For this reason, daughters, I attach great importance to you vocal prayers well. I know a nun who could never practise anything but vocal prayer but wh and found she had everything else; yet if she omitted saying her prayers her mind wandere she could not endure it. May we all practise such mental prayer as that. She would say a n Paternosters, corresponding to the number of times Our Lord shed His blood, and on nothi and a few other prayers she would spend two or three hours. She came to me once in gre that she did not know how to practise mental prayer, and that she could not contemplate bu vocal prayers. She was quite an old woman and had lived an extremely good and religiou

If this story is true--and it is--none of you who have had a bad contemplatives can suppose that you will be free from the risk of becoming like them if you vocal prayers as they should be said and keep a pure conscience. I shall have to say still m Anyone not wishing to hear it may pass it over.

[105] "I kingdom come."

CHAPTER 31Continues the same subject. Explains what is meant by the Prayer of Q several counsels to those who experience it. This chapter is very noteworthy. Now, daught to describe this Prayer of Quiet to you, in the way I have heard it talked about, and as the L pleased to teach it to me, perhaps in order that I might describe it to you. It is in this kind o prayer, as I have said, that the Lord seems to me to begin to show us that He is hearing ou begins to give us His Kingdom on earth so that we may truly praise Him and hallow His na make others do so likewise. This is a supernatural state, and, however hard we try, we can for ourselves; for it is a state in which the soul enters into peace, or rather in which the Lord peace through His presence, as He did to that just man Simeon. [106] In this state all the stilled. The soul, in a way which has nothing to do with the outward senses, realizes that it close to its God, and that, if it were but a little closer, it would become one with Him throug This is not because it sees Him either with its bodily or with its spiritual eyes. The just man no more than the glorious Infant--a poor little Child, Who, to judge from the swaddling-clot He was wrapped and from the small number of the people whom He had as a retinue to tal Temple, might well have been the son of these poor people rather than the Son of his Hea But the Child Himself revealed to him Who He was. Just so, though less clearly, does the s is. It cannot understand how it knows Him, yet it sees that it is in the Kingdom (or at least the King Who will give it the Kingdom), and it feels such reverence that it dares to ask noth it were, in a swoon, both inwardly and outwardly, so that the outward man (let me call it th and then you will understand me better) does not wish to move, but rests, like one who has the end of his journey, so that it may the better start again upon its way, with redoubled st its task. The body experiences the greatest delight and the soul is conscious of a deep sa So glad is it merely to find itself near the fountain that, even before it has begun to drink, it its fill. There seems nothing left for it to desire. The faculties are stilled and have no wish t for any movement they may make appears to hinder the soul from loving God. They are no however, since, two of them being free, they can realize in Whose Presence they are. It is is in captivity now; and, if while in this state it is capable of experiencing any pain, the pain when it realizes that it will have to resume its liberty. The mind tries to occupy itself with o thing, and the memory has no desire to busy itself with more: they both see that this is the needful and that anything else will unsettle them. Persons in this state prefer the body to r motionless, for otherwise their peace would be destroyed: for this reason they dare not stir distress to them: they will spend a whole hour on a single repetition of the Paternoster. favour which is hard to understand if one has not had long experience of it. But any of you this will at once recognize it and it will give you great comfort to know what it is. I believe G grants this favour together with the other. When this quiet is felt in a high degree and lasts me as of that which is Thine own, in accordance with Thy will. Oh, my sisters, what power has! If it be made with due resolution, it cannot fail to draw the Almighty to become one wit lowliness and to transform us into Himself and to effect a union between the Creator and th yourselves if that will not be a rich reward for you, and if you have not a good Master. For, how the good will of His Father is to be gained, He teaches us how and by what means we The more resolute we are in soul and the more we show Him by our actions that the words not words of mere politeness, the more and more does Our Lord draw us to Himself and ra petty earthly things, and above ourselves, in order to prepare us to receive great favours fr His rewards for our service will not end with this life. So much does He value this service o we do not know for what more we can ask, while His Majesty never wearies of giving. Not o made this soul one with Himself, through uniting it to Himself, He begins to cherish it, to re secrets to it, to rejoice in its understanding of what it has gained and in the knowledge whic all He has yet to give it. He causes it gradually to lose its exterior senses so that nothing m it. This we call rapture. He begins to make such a friend of the soul that not only does He r will to it but He gives it His own also. For, now that He is making a friend of it, He is glad to it to rule with Him, as we say, turn and turn about. So He does what the soul asks of Him, j does what He commands, only in a much better way, since He is all-powerful and can do w desires, and His desire never comes to an end. But the poor soul, despite its desires, is oft do all it would like, nor can it do anything at all unless it is given the power. [115] And so it richer and richer; and the more it serves, the greater becomes its debt; and often, growing finding itself subjected to all the inconveniences and impediments and bonds which it has while it is in the prison of this body, it would gladly pay something of what it owes, for it is q out. But even if we do all that is in us, how can we repay God, since, as I say, we have no save what we have first received? We can only learn to know ourselves and do what we ca our will and fulfil God's will in us. Anything else must be a hindrance to the soul which the brought to this state. It causes it, not profit, but harm, for nothing but humility is of any use this is not acquired by the understanding but by a clear perception of the truth, which com one moment what could not be attained over a long period by the labour of the imagination are nothing and that God is infinitely great. I will give you one piece of advice: do not supp you can reach this state by your own effort or diligence; that would be too much to expect contrary, you would turn what devotion you had quite cold. You must practise simplicity and those are the virtues which achieve everything. You must say: "Fiat voluntas tua."

33Treats of our great need that the Lord should give us what we ask in these words of the "Panem nostrum quotidianum da nobis hodie." [116] The good Jesus understands, as I hav difficult a thing He is offering on our behalf, for He knows our weakness, and how often we do not understand what the will of the Lord is, since we are weak while He is so merciful. H some means must be found by which we shall not omit to give what He has given on our several hours, and if any little spark flies out, it will set it on fire. It is of such importance, daughters, for us to prepare ourselves in thy way that you must not be surprised if I often r counsel. If at first you do not get on with this practice (which may happen, for the devil wil oppress and distress your heart, knowing what great harm he can do in this way), the devil think that you can find more devotion in other things and less in this. But [trust me and] do up this method, for the Lord will use it to prove your love for Him. Remember that there are stay with Him and follow Him in His trials; let us endure something for Him and His Majest us. Remember, too, that there are actually people who not only have no wish to be with Hi Him and with great irreverence drive Him away from their homes. We must endure somet show Him that we have the desire to see Him. In many places He is neglected and ill-treate suffers everything, and will continue to do so, if He finds but one single soul which will rec and love to have Him as its Guest. [123] Let this soul be yours, then, for, if there were none Father would rightly refuse to allow Him to remain with us. Yet the Lord is so good a Frien who are His friends, and so good a Master to those who are His servants, that, when He kn will of His Beloved Son, He will not hinder Him in so excellent a work, in which His Son so reveals the love which He has for His Father, as this wonderful way which He seeks of sho loves us and of helping us to bear our trials. Since, then, Holy Father, Who art in the Heav dost will and accept this (and it is clear that Thou couldst not deny us a thing which is so g us) there must be someone, as I said at the beginning, who will speak for Thy Son, for He defended Himself. Let this be the task for us, daughters, though, having regard to what w presumptuous of us to undertake it. Let us rely, however, on Our Lord's command to us to in fulfilment of our obedience to Him, let us beseech His Majesty, in the name of the good as He has left nothing undone that He could do for us in granting sinners so great a favour pleased of His mercy to prevent Him from being so ill-treated. Since His Holy Son has give excellent way in which we can offer Him up frequently as a sacrifice, let us make use of this so that it may stay the advance of such terrible evil and irreverence as in many places is Most Holy Sacrament. For these Lutherans seem to want to drive Him out of the world aga churches, cause the loss of many priests and abolish the sacraments. [124] And there is this even among Christians, who sometimes go to church meaning to offend Him rather tha Why is this, my Lord and my God? Do Thou bring the world to an end or give us a remedy wrongs, which even our wicked hearts cannot endure. I beseech Thee, Eternal Father, end quench this fire, Lord, for Thou canst do so if Thou wilt. Remember that Thy Son is still in t these dreadful things be stopped out of respect for Him, horrible and abominable and foul a With His beauty and purity He does not deserve to be in a house where such things happe not for our sake, for we do not deserve it, but for the sake of Thy Son. as I understand (and I have talked about it with many contemplatives), is quite usual, and I fact that it happens. Just as other people prize gold and jewels, so these persons prize and trials, for they know quite well that trials will make them rich. Such persons would never o account esteem themselves: they want their sins to be known and like to speak about them they see have any esteem for them. The same is true of their descent, which they know q of no advantage to them in the kingdom which has no end. If being of good birth were any them, it would be because this would enable them to serve God better. If they are not wel distresses them when people think them better than they are, and it causes them no distres them, but only pleasure. The reason for this is that those to whom God grants the favour such humility and great love for Him forget themselves when there is a possibility of render greater services, and simply cannot believe that others are troubled by things which they not consider as wrongs at all. These last effects which I have mentioned are produced in p have reached a high degree of perfection and to whom the Lord commonly grants the favo Himself by perfect contemplation. But the first of these effects--namely, the determination t wrongs even though such suffering brings distress--is very quickly seen in anyone to whom granted this grace of prayer as far as the stage of union. If these effects are not produced i it is not strengthened by prayer, you may take it that this was not Divine favour but indulge illusion coming from the devil, which he makes us think to be good, so that we may attach to our honour. It may be that, when the Lord first grants these favours, the soul will not immediately attain this fortitude. But, if He continues to grant them, He will soon give it forti certainly, at least, as regards forgiveness, if not in the other virtues as well. I cannot believe a soul which has approached so nearly to Mercy Itself, and has learned to know itself and t God's pardon, will not immediately and readily forgive, and be mollified and remain on good person who has done it wrong. For such a soul remembers the consolation and grace whic which it has recognized the signs of great love, and it is glad that the occasion presents itse showing Him some love in return. I repeat that I know many persons to whom Our Lord has grace of raising them to supernatural experiences and of giving them this prayer, or conten has been described; and although I may notice other faults and imperfections in them, I ha such a person who had this particular fault, nor do I believe such a person exists, if the fav received are of God. If any one of you receives high favours, let her look within herself and are producing these effects, and, if they are not, let her be very fearful, and believe that th consolations are not of God, Who, as I have said, when He visits the soul, always enriches certain; for, although the grace and the consolations may pass quickly, it can be recognize through the benefits which it bestows on the soul. And, as the good Jesus knows this well, definite assurance to His Holy Father that we are forgiving our debtors.

We must insincere with Him, for He loves us, in all our dealings with Him, to be honest, and to treat frankly and openly, never saying one thing and meaning another; and then He will always g we ask for. Our good Master knows that those who attain real perfection in their petitions this high degree through the favours which the Father will grant them, and is aware that tho already perfect, or who are on the way to perfection, do not and cannot fear, for they say th trampled the world beneath their feet, and the Lord of the world is pleased with them. They greatest hope of His Majesty's pleasure from the effects which He produces in their souls; these joys, they wish they were unable to remember that there is any other world at all, and enemies. O Eternal Wisdom! O good Teacher! What a wonderful thing it is, daughters, to prudent Master who foresees our perils! This is the greatest blessing that the spiritual soul earth can desire, because it brings complete security. No words could ever exaggerate th this. The Lord, then, saw it was necessary to awaken such souls and to remind them that t and how much greater danger they are in if they are unprepared, and, since if they fall it w a greater height, how much more help they need from the Eternal Father. So, lest they sho realize their danger and suffer deception, He offers these petitions so necessary to us all live in this exile: "And lead us not, Lord, into temptation, but deliver us from evil."

38Treats of the great need which we have to beseech the Eternal Father to grant uswhat we words: "Et ne nos inducas in tentationem, sed libera nos a malo." [132] Explains certain te This chapter is noteworthy. There are great things here for us to meditate upon, sisters, an to understand as we pray. Remember I consider it quite certain that those who attain perfe the Lord to deliver them from trials, temptations, persecutions and conflicts--and that is an and striking sign that these favours and this contemplation which His Majesty gives them a the Spirit of the Lord and are not illusions. For, as I said a little way back, perfect souls are way repelled by trials, but rather desire them and pray for them and love them. They are lik more wars there are, the better they are pleased, because they hope to emerge from ther riches. [133] If there are no wars, they serve for their pay, but they know they will not get ve that. Believe me, sisters, the soldiers of Christ--namely, those who experience contempla practise prayer--are always ready for the hour of conflict. They are never very much afraid enemies, for they know who they are and are sure that their strength can never prevail aga strength which they themselves have been given by the Lord: they will always be victorious riches, so they will never turn their backs on the battle. Those whom they fear, and fear rig about it from experience, so I can describe it to you, though not as well as I should like. W do about it, sisters? To me the best thing seems to be what our Master teaches us: to pray the Eternal Father not to allow us to fall into temptation. There is something else, too, whi to tell you. If we think the Lord has given us a certain grace, we must understand that it is a which we have received but which He may take away from us again, as indeed, in the grea often happens. Have you never observed this yourselves, sisters? I certainly have: somet he possesses any virtue, or that he is rich, if at the time when he most needs this virtue he without having the means of repayment. Our treasure must come from elsewhere and we will leave us in this prison of our misery without giving us any. If others, thinking we are go bestow favours and honours upon us, both they and we shall look foolish when, as I say, it that our virtues are only lent us. The truth is that, if we serve the Lord with humility, He wil or later succour us in our needs. But, if we are not strong in this virtue, the Lord will leave u ourselves, as they say, at every step. This is a great favour on His part, for it helps us to r fully that we have nothing which has not been given us. And now you must take note of th of advice. The devil makes us believe that we have some virtue--patience, let us say--bec determination and make continual resolutions to suffer a great deal for God's sake. We rea believe that we would suffer all this, and the devil encourages us in the belief, and so we a pleased. I advise you to place no reliance on these virtues: we ought not to think that we kn

But when, a the watch, we realize that this is a temptation, as regards both the virtue I have spoken of rest; for when we really have one of these solid virtues, it brings all the rest in its train: that very well-known fact.

The differences, however, are so wide tha two is given as it stands.

CHAPTER 39 Continues the same subject and gives counsels concerning d of temptation. Suggests two remedies by which we may be freed from temptations.

[135] Beware also, daughters, of certain kinds of humility which the devil inculcates i which make us very uneasy about the gravity of our past sins. There are many ways in whi to depress us so that in time we withdraw from Communion and give up our private praye devil suggests to us that we are not worthy to engage in it. When we come to the Most Hol spend the time during which we ought to be receiving grace in wondering whether we are or no. The thing gets to such a pass that a soul can be made to believe that, through being has been forsaken by God, and thus it almost doubts His mercy. Everything such a perso her to be dangerous, and all the service she renders, however good it may be, seems to he loses confidence and sits with her hands in her lap because she thinks she can do nothin what is good in others is wrong in herself. Pay great attention, daughters, to this point whi now make, because sometimes thinking yourselves so wicked may be humility and virtue a very great temptation. I have had experience of this, so I know it is true. Humility, howeve be, neither disquiets nor troubles nor disturbs the soul; it is accompanied by peace, joy ar tranquillity. Although, on realizing how wicked we are, we can see clearly that we deserve t and are distressed by our sinfulness, and rightly think that everyone should hate us, yet, i humility is true, this distress is accompanied by an interior peace and joy of which we shou be deprived. Far from disturbing or depressing the soul, it enlarges it and makes it fit to se better. The other kind of distress only disturbs and upsets the mind and troubles the soul, s it. I think the devil is anxious for us to believe that we are humble, and, if he can, to lead u distrust God. When you find yourselves in this state, cease thinking, so far as you can, of wretchedness, and think of the mercy of God and of His love and His sufferings for us. If yo mind is the result of temptation, you will be unable to do even this, for it will not allow you your thoughts or to fix them on anything but will only weary you the more: it will be a great t

40Describes how, by striving always to walk in the love and fear of God, we shall safely amid all these temptations. Show us, then, O our good Master, some way in which w through this most dangerous warfare without frequent surprise. The best way that we can daughters, is to use the love and fear given us by His Majesty. For love will make us quicke while fear will make us look where we are setting our feet so that we shall not fall on a roa there are so many obstacles. Along that road all living creatures must pass, and if we have things we shall certainly not be deceived. You will ask me how you can tell if you really ha two very, very great virtues. [137] You are right to ask, for we can never be quite definite a about it; if we were sure that we possessed love, we should be sure that we were in a state you know, sisters, there are some indications which are in no way secret but so evident th blind man, as people say, could see them. You may not wish to heed them, but they cry so that they make quite an uproar, for there are not many who possess them to the point of p thus they are the more readily noticed. Love and fear of God! These are two strong castles wage war on the world and on the devils. Those who really love God love all good, seek a forward all good, praise all good, and invariably join forces with good men and help and d They love only truth and things worthy of love. Do you think it possible that anyone who rea loves God can love vanities, riches, worldly pleasures or honours? Can he engage in strif No; for his only desire is to please the Beloved. Such persons die with longing for Him to lo they will give their lives to learn how they may please Him better. Will they hide their love? their love for God is genuine love they cannot. Why, think of Saint Paul or the Magdalen. O these--Saint Paul--found in three days that he was sick with love. The Magdalen discover very first day. And how certain of it they were! For there are degrees of love for God, which in proportion to its strength. If there is little of it, it shows itself but little; if there is much, it shows itself a great deal. But it always shows itself, whether little or much, provided it is r for God. But to come to what we are chiefly treating of now--the deceptions and illusions p against contemplatives by the devil--such souls have no little love; for had they not a great would not be contemplatives, and so their love shows itself plainly and in many ways. Bei useful to him, for there are two well-known ways in which he can make use of this means t nothing of others. First, he can make those who listen to him fearful of engaging in prayer they think that they will be deceived. Secondly, he can dissuade many from approaching G safe in this life amid the engulfing dangers of this stormy sea. Wherever this love is, then, not fail to recognize it; I do not know how it could be concealed. For they say that it is impo us to hide our love even for creatures, and that, the more we try to conceal it, the more cl revealed. And yet this is so worthless that it hardly deserves the name of love, for it is foun nothing at all: it is loathsome, indeed, to make this comparison. How, then, could a love li concealed--so strong, so righteous, continually increasing, never seeing cause for ceasing itself, and resting upon the firm foundation of the love which is its reward? As to the reality reward there can be no doubt, for it is manifest in Our Lord's great sorrows, His trials, the s His blood and even the loss of His life. Certainly, then, there is no doubt as to this love. It death, when we are going we know not whither, to realize that we shall be judged by One loved above all things, and with a passion that makes us entirely forget ourselves. Once ou been paid we shall be able to walls in safety. We shall not be going into a foreign land, but country, for it belongs to Him Whom we have loved so truly and Who Himself loves us. For His, besides its other properties, is better than all earthly affection in that, if we love Him, w quite sure that He loves us too. Remember, my daughters, the greatness of the gain which love, and of our loss if we do not possess it, for in that case we shall be delivered into the h tempter, hands so cruel and so hostile to all that is good, and so friendly to all that is evil. will become of the poor soul when it falls into these hands after emerging from all the pains death? How little rest it will have! How it will be torn as it goes down to hell! What swarms a varieties of serpents it will meet! How dreadful is that place! How miserable that lodging! W person (and most of those who go to hell are that) can hardly bear to spend a single night i what, then, will be the feelings of that wretched soul when it is condemned to such an inn a to spend eternity there? [138] Let us not try to pamper ourselves, daughters. We are quite here: there is only a single night for us to spend in this bad inn. Let us praise God and striv penance in this life. How sweet will be the death of those who have done penance for all th have not to go to purgatory! It may be that they will begin to enjoy glory even in this world know no fear, but only peace. Even if we do not attain to this, sisters, let us beseech God t due course we must suffer these pains, it may be with a hope of emerging from them. Ther them willingly and lose neither the friendship nor the grace of God. May He grant us these so that we may not unwittingly fall into temptation.

CHAPTER 41 Speaks of the fear of God and of how we must keep ourselves from venial sin enlarged on this subject! Yet I have not said as much about it as I should like; for it is a deli thing to talk about this love of God. What, then, must it be to possess it? May the Lord, for sake, give it me! May I not depart from this life till there is nothing in it that I desire, till I hav forgotten what it is to love anything but Thee and till I deny the name of love to any other ki affection--for all love is false but love of Thee, and, unless the foundations of a building are building itself will not endure. I do not know why it surprises us to hear people say: "So-ar made me a poor return for something." "Someone else does not like me." I laugh to myself What other sort of return do you expect him to make you? And why do you expect anyone things will show you what the world is; your love itself becomes your punishment, and the r are so upset about it is that your will strongly resents your involving it in such childish pas Let us now come to the fear of God--though I am sorry not to be able to say a little about t love, which, for my sins, I know well and should like to acquaint you with, so that you may f from it for ever. But I am straying from my subject and shall have to pass on. This fear of another thing with which those who possess it and those who have to do with them are ver should like you to realize that at first it is not very deep, save in a few people, to whom, as said, the Lord grants such great favours as to make them rich in virtues and to raise them, time, to great heights of prayer. It is not recognizable, therefore, at first, in everyone. As it increases, it grows stronger each day, and then, of course, it can be recognized, for those forsake sin, and occasions of sin, and bad company, and other signs of it are visible in the last the soul attains to contemplation, of which we are chiefly treating at the moment, its fea plainly revealed, and its love is not dissembled even outwardly. However narrowly we wat we shall not find them growing careless; for, close as our watch on them may be, the Lord that they would not knowingly commit one venial sin even to further their own interests, ar mortal sin, they fear it like fire. These are the illusions, sisters, which I should like you alwa fear; let us always beseech God that temptation may not be strong enough for us to offen He may send it to us in proportion to the strength which He gives us to conquer it. If we kee conscience, we can suffer little or no harm. That is the important point; and that is the fea hope will never be taken from us, for it is that fear which will stand us in good stead. Oh, w great thing it is not to have offended the Lord, so that the servants and slaves of hell [139] under control! In the end, whether willingly or no, we shall all serve Him--they by compuls with our whole heart. So that, if we please Him, they will be kept at bay and will do nothing us, however much they lead us into temptation and lay secret snares for us. Keep this in r is very important advice, so do not neglect it until you find you have such a fixed determina offend the Lord that you would rather lose a thousand lives and be persecuted by the who commit one mortal sin, and until you are most careful not to commit venial sins. I am referri committed knowingly: as far as those of the other kind are concerned, who can fail to com frequently? But it is one thing to commit a sin knowingly and after long deliberation, and qu do it so suddenly that the knowledge of its being a venial sin and its commission are one a thing, and we hardly realize what we have done, although we do to some extent realize it. I however small, committed with full knowledge, may God deliver us, especially since we are so great a Sovereign and realizing that He is watching us! That seems to me to be a sin c malice aforethought; it is as though one were to say: "Lord, although this displeases Thee, I know that Thou seest it and I know that Thou wouldst not have me do it; but, though I un I would rather follow my own whim and desire than Thy will." If we commit a sin in this way slight, it seems to me that our offence is not small but very, very great. For the love of Goo sisters, never be careless about this --and, glory be to the Lord, you are not so at present. gain this fear of God, remember the importance of habit and of starting to realize what a s it is to offend Him. Do your utmost to learn this and to turn it over in your minds; for our life, more than our life, depends upon this virtue being firmly planted in our souls. Until you are within your soul of possessing it, you need always to exercise very great care and to avoid of sin and any kind of company which will not help you to get nearer to God. Be most care that you do, to bend your will to it; see that all you say tends to edification; flee from all plac are, the more sociable they should be with their sisters. Although you may be very sorry if sisters' conversation is not just as you would like it to be, never keep aloof from them if you help them and to have their love. We must try hard to be pleasant, and to humour the peop and make them like us, especially our sisters. So try, my daughters, to bear in mind that Go great attention to all the trifling matters which occupy you, and do not allow these things to spirit quail and your courage fade, for if you do that you may lose many blessings. As I hav your intention be upright and your will determined not to offend God. But do not let your s seclusion, or, instead of acquiring holiness, you will develop many imperfections, which the implant in you in other ways, in which case, as I have said, you will not do the good that yo either to yourselves or to others. You see that, with these two things--love and fear of God- travel along this road in peace and quietness, and not think at every step that we can see s and that we shall never reach our goal. [140] Yet we cannot be sure of reaching it, so fear lead the way, and then we shall not grow careless, for, as long as we live, we must never f safe or we shall be in great danger. And that was our Teacher's meaning when at the end He said these words to His Father, knowing how necessary they were: "But deliver us from deliver us from evil. Amen." I think the good Jesus was right to ask this for Himself, for we weary of this life He was when at the Supper He said to His Apostles: "With desire I have d with you" [141] --and that was the last supper of His life. From this it can be seen how wear have been of living; yet nowadays people are not weary even at a hundred years old, but a longer. It is true, however, that we do not live so difficult a life or suffer such trials or such poverty as His Majesty had to bear. What was His whole life but a continuous death, with th cruel death that He was to suffer always before His eyes? And this was the least important so many offenses being committed against His Father and such a multitude of souls being human being full of charity this is a great torment, what must it have been to the boundless measureless charity of the Lord? And how right He was to beseech the Father to deliver Hi evils and trials and to give Him rest for ever in His Kingdom, of which He was the true heir. word "Amen," as it comes at the end of every prayer, I understand that the Lord is begging delivered from all evil for ever. It is useless, sisters, for us to think that, for so long as we we can be free from numerous temptations and imperfections and even sins; for it is said th thinks himself to be without sin deceives himself, and that is true. But if we try to banish b and trials--and who is without very many and various trials of such kinds?--is it not right tha ask to be delivered from sin? Still, let us realize that what we are asking here--this deliver from all evil--seems an impossibility, whether we are thinking of bodily ills, as I have said, o imperfections and faults in God's service. I am referring, not to the saints, who, as Saint Pa can do all things in Christ [142] but to sinners like myself. When I find myself trammelled by lukewarmness, lack of mortification and many other things, I realize that I must beg for help Lord. You, daughters, must ask as you think best. Personally, I shall find no redress in thi I ask the Lord to deliver me from all evil "for ever." What good thing shall we find in this life, in which we are deprived of our great Good and are absent from Him? Deliver me, Lord, f of death; deliver me from all these trials; deliver me from all these pains; deliver me from al changes, from all the formalities with which we are forced to comply for as long as we live, many, many, many things which weary and depress me, and the enumeration of all of whic reader if I were to repeat them. This life is unendurable. The source of my own depression wicked life and the realization that even now I am not living as I should, so great are my obligations. I beseech the Lord, then, to deliver me from all evil for ever, since I cannot pa owe, and may perhaps run farther into debt each day. And the hardest thing to bear, Lord, know with any certainty if I love Thee and if my desires are acceptable in Thy sight. O my deliver me from all evil and be pleased to lead me to that place where all good things are to What can be looked for on earth by those to whom Thou hast given some knowledge of wh those who have a living faith in what the Eternal Father has laid up for them because His S Him and teaches us to ask Him for it too? When contemplatives ask for this with fervent d full determination it is a very clear sign that their contemplation is genuine and that the fav which they receive in prayer are from God. Let those who have these favours, [143] then, p But if I myself make this request it is not for that reason (I mean, it must not be taken as b that reason); it is because I am wearied by so many trials and because my life has been so afraid of living any longer. It is not surprising if those who share in the favours of God sho to pass to a life where they no longer enjoy mere sips at them: being already partakers in s of His greatness, they would fain see it in its entirety. They have no desire to remain wher so many hindrances to the enjoyment of so many blessings; nor that they should desire to of justice never sets. Henceforward all the things they see on earth seem dim to them and they can live for even an hour. No one can be content to do so who has begun to enjoy suc been given the Kingdom of God on earth, and must live to do, not his own will, but the will King. Oh, far other must be that life in which we no longer desire death! How differently sh incline our wills towards the will of God! His will is for us to desire truth, whereas we desire His will is for us to desire the eternal, whereas we prefer that which passes away; His will to desire great and sublime things, whereas we desire the base things of earth; He would h only what is certain, whereas here on earth we love what is doubtful. What a mockery it all daughters, unless we beseech God to deliver us from these perils for ever and to keep us f And although our desire for this may not be perfect, let us strive to make the petition. Wha cost us to ask it, since we ask it of One Who is so powerful? It would be insulting a great er him for a farthing. Since we have already given Him our will, let us leave the giving to His that we may be the more surely heard; and may His name be for ever hallowed in the Heav

"For God's sake," I gasped back with a grin "don't let her hear you talk like that."

A month before their scheduled vacation Paul came home from work only to hear Cathy on t sounded very upset.

"What's wrong?" He whispered.

Cathy looked at him as if he had done something wrong.

“What?!” He questioned.

“Tracy don’t cry….”Cathy said. “Look! I’m coming over.” Hanging up the phone she looked a cry.

“Mark… that son of a bitch…. “ She snapped. “Tracy just found out he has been cheating on

Over the next few weeks Cathy spent a lot of time with Tracy. They went out quite a bit and Tracy had turned things around pretty well.

Even though she was feeling better Cathy and Paul knew that with the holidays on the horiz “Tracy. It is already paid for and you really need to get away.” Cathy said.

“I am going to be the third wheel and I am not exactly a lot of fun right now.” She replied.

This went on until the day before the trip and somehow Cathy convinced her to go. When Ca

Despite being a little hung over they managed to get on the road by 6am and after a quick b felt much better. The girls were in good spirits and the four-hour drive passed quickly.

When they arrived at the Chalet it was snowing pretty heavy but the scenery was beautiful. T excited they rushed into the house to check things out. The small house had two bedrooms full baths, a small kitchen, and a big living room leading out to a deck. The deck was the len Tracy finally spoke.

“This is perfect. I am glad you two talked me into coming.” She smiled at Cathy and Paul.

“See.” Smiled Cathy. “I knew you just needed to get away and I knew Paul wouldn’t care.”

“No. This is great. I am glad you’re here. How can I complain? Sitting in a Jacuzzi with good food, and two hot chicks.” Paul laughed.

“Settle down.” Cathy said. “Put your dick in check.”

“He’s just a man Cath. I would expect nothing less.” Tracy chimed in.

“Hey. I didn’t mean anything like that.” This was not exactly the truth.

“Paul.” Cathy gave him that ‘Don’t bullshit me’ look.

“What?” He laughed.

“I know the way you think. Nothing would please you more they to have our tops magically c just bare all for you.”

“Well, that’s true but you haven’t had enough to drink.” Paul laughed.

“Dream on.’ Said Cathy. “You are so predictable”

“I know men always are.” Tracy added. “I bet we could guess what he thinks before he does “Sure. Want to?” Cathy said.

“Yeah. Lets.” Tracy said. “What you say?” She directed at Paul. Paul was not sure where the

“No way.” He quickly replied not sure what he was getting himself into.

“What ever you say.” Paul knew he shouldn’t have given them the power to set the rules to t challenge, whatever it would be?

“Fine.” Answered Cathy as she leaned over to whisper to Tracy.

“Alright. Fine.” Paul relented.

The girls continued to whisper and giggle until Tracy finally spoke up. “OK. Here are the rule question and if we guess what your answer is going to be then you have to drink. If we are w but you have to be honest."

"What kind of questions do we ask?" Paul asked.

"Ask anything honey." Cathy smiled. "I know your dick better they you do."

"You know this could get personal Cath?" Paul said to Cathy.

"Don't worry about Trace honey. She is a big girl." Cathy taunted him.

"OK. If that's the way you want it." Paul wasn't really into games but this could get interestin "Ohh yeah." Tracy said as she got out of the tub and ran into the house.

"Where is she going?" Paul asked.

"To get a pencil and paper. You have to write your answers down." Cathy teased him.

"You're kidding?" Paul said.

"Don't worry honey we will too." Cathy said as Tracy quickly ran back to the tub and got in.

"Ohhh this warm water feels good." She said as she sat down. Paul just stared at her body.

“My ass.” Said Cathy.

“Her tits.’ Added Tracy. Both girls were both laughing at how easy that one was.

“C’mon. That is not necessary true. It could be her eyes or her hair.” Paul added.

“C’mon Paul.” Cathy argued. “Since when do you notice eyes or hair?’

“All the time. It appears you don’t know me like you think.” Paul laughed. “See I have it writte ‘Wow! Was she hot?’ Paul thought, but that was easy. He knew her eye color.

“Green.” He said.

“Impressive.” Cathy laughed. “Tracy figured all you were looking at here were her tits.”

“Well I was looking at those too.” Paul said. “But you still have to drink.”

That is how it went for the next hour with Paul winning some and loosing some but he was in “OK. You girls are doing alright but this is getting boring.” Paul finally said.

“What’s wrong Paul?” Mocked Tracy. “You can’t handle it?”

“Yeah.” Added Cathy. “Can’t handle the truth?” The girls were getting pretty looped now and good time at Paul’s expense.

“Sure I can.” He laughed. “But let’s make this more interesting.” He said. “Let’s sweeten the

It shocked Paul that Cathy was not bothered by this situation at all. She was enjoying hersel didn't even bother her when Tracy commented on his arousal.

After the massage Paul returned to his side of the Jacuzzi and announced it was his turn. "C been paid handsomely for winning that round but it is my turn for a question. Alright let's see two know me so well then what one 'thing' do I find most erotic on a woman?"

"You're a T&A man Paul." Said Tracy. "That always gets guys." She directed to Cathy. "He's there more then that?"

"Hmmmm…. There are a few things he just loves." Cathy said back to Tracy.

"He loves tits and ass for sure but…." She trailed off in thought. "It could be lips, eyes or abs finally said looking at Paul for a reaction.

"Well." Laughed Tracy. "He sure likes a lot about a woman. You're not sure?"

"I think it would be her tits." Cathy finally said all tough she was unsure of herself.

"Ok. Her tits." said Tracy.

"Wrong." Paul answered. "I think the most erotic thing is a freshly shaved pussy."

"Shit." Cathy said quickly. "That's right… he has said that to me before."

"Cath!" laughed Tracy while splashing her. "You forgot that!"

"Well… a few drinks and look at the man. Every thing turns him on." Cathy defended herself

"Well well. It seems I am in the drivers' seat now." Paul smiled. "What shall it be? I think I lik suggestion Cathy made earlier. Off with the tops."

"What a surprise." Mocked Tracy.

"Yeah. Could you see that one coming Trace?" Added Cathy. "Oh well. I guess we can give give us a great massage." With that they reached around and pulled off both tops.

“Yummy.” Laughed Paul. The girls were good sports and laughed along with him. Paul was slightly smaller tits then Cathy but they were the perfect shape with eraser size nipples that nice and hard at the moment. Paul was not sure if it was the cold air or the situation unfoldin Maybe both.

“OK. Our turn.” Tracy said. She closed the distance with Cathy and they started with the whi Finally Tracy said. “OK Paul. On that piece of paper you must write your three most favorite and we think we can guess them.”

“You mean like positions or … what?” Paul asked.

“Anything.” Cathy responded confidently. She let the earlier one slip by but she knew Paul w sure she knew exactly what he would say. Cathy was getting pretty drunk and had to pick so have to concentrate on too much.

“You will never get all three.” Paul tried to tell them. “Ill have your suit bottoms lying next to y He laughed.

“You better hope not because we have a good one if we guess right.” Tracy warned.

“Ok.” Paul shrugged. He thought for a minute and started to write. “Ok. Fire away.”

“I know one is a blowjob.” Tracy said.

“Yeah. That’s an easy one.” Paul laughed.

“Ok honey. One would be when I am shaven clean and you are eating me out.” Cathy smirk

“Yes that is basically what I had.” Paul started to sweat a little. The more he thought about it realized this was not so tough for someone that knew him. He had been had.

“And finally.” Cathy added. “When you fuck me up the ass.”

Tracy looked quickly at Cathy. “Really?” That is something Tracy has always wanted try but “OK Mr. Big stuff. You have lost again.” Cathy was smiling at Tracy now.

“We have been talking and we feel you should know what it is like to have a shaved crotch.”

Paul knew where she was going with this and made quite a face at the girls. “No?”

“Yes.” Tracy laughed, “You must shave and be quick about it.”

“Shit. Are you serious?” Paul said quietly. The girls were now laughing.

“Go on Paul.” Cathy said. “And don’t think we won’t verify this so you better be clean.”

Paul slowly pulled himself out of the water hoping they would change their minds but eviden serious. He was gone for nearly thirty minutes but the girls waited patiently for his return.

“Ahhhh. Here’s Mr. Clean now.” Cathy smiled as Paul approached. Paul hopped into the Jac

“What a job. That is not an easy thing for a guy to do.” Paul stated as he started to drink. Lo women were staring at him. “What?”

“Well.” Said Cathy. “Let’s see.” Paul looked at Tracy then Cathy. “Don’t worry about her.” Ca

The more she thought about it the more she realized that Tracy is probably the one woman she has never kissed a woman. ‘Well it’s just one quick kiss.’ She kept telling herself.

She watched as Tracy and Paul continued teasing back and forth. This didn’t seem to bothe

“What is it with men and seeing women together?” Tracy splashed him.

“It is in our jeans Trace.” He laughed back. “Well?” he finally said.

“OK OK.” Tracy laughed. “Ready beautiful?” She directed to Cathy.

Cathy couldn’t figure out why this was bothering her. It was just a kiss. One little kiss that did anything.

“Yeah. Let’s do it.” She answered. Tracy was already kneeling in the middle and she turned hand. Cathy slid up next to her in the middle of the Jacuzzi and Paul watched as the girls pr

When they were only a few inches apart Paul noticed Tracy seemed very focused now.

Cathy suddenly noticed things about Tracy she never realized. Her face was absolutely bea ‘Snap out of it Cath.” She finally told herself. ‘It is just the alcohol’.

“I wish I could have filmed that.” Paul added. “That was incredible.”

“Ok. Ok.” Tracy finished. “God Paul. It was just a kiss.”

“Yeah.” Cathy managed to say. “I think it is time to get out of this thing.” She laughed, “I feel

The others agreed and they all proceeded into the house. Tracy went to her room to change Cathy.

Cathy was very quiet since they left the Hot tub and this didn’t go unnoticed by Paul.

“Hey what’s up? Are you mad at me?” He asked.

“No.” She answered. “Just tired I guess. All that alcohol and warm water.”

Paul studied her and knew something else was there. He closed the distance.

“You know?” He started. “That was the hottest thing I have ever seen. How was it?”

Cathy watched Tracy slowly move closer. The feel of her firm breasts pressed into her own. through her body when she felt the hard nipples press against her own and then Tracy's har waist. Her mouth less then an inch away parted and Tracy's tongue slid out and ran across

'OH MY GOD!' Cathy thought. 'She is so sexy.' Cathy felt herself getting wet and now her bo to Tracy. 'I can't be doing this.' Cathy fought with herself. She weakly tried to stop Tracy but her feeble protests. Her tongue pushed past Cathy's lips and into her mouth. Cathy's mouth soft wetness and she moaned. Cathy felt herself slipping.

Again Cathy tried to stop herself but then she felt Tracy's hand slide up her back and around shivered. Tracy then pulled Cathy hard against her body and pressed her mouth to Cathy's.

'God is she turning me on.' Cathy thought. Cathy was rapidly loosing the battle. Her best frie her. Cathy's head was spinning and now she was responding to Tracy completely.

Cathy was worried what people would think but despite this she was kissing her back and no Not even realizing it her hands moved to Tracy's waist and pulled her body to her own. Her t intoxicating and her smell was so feminine. Kissing Tracy was the most erotic thing she has talented mouth began to build the desire in Cathy. Her kiss was passionate and that of a lov teased and tasted as their arousal increased.

Tracy finally broke the kiss and looked Cathy in the eye. Cathy felt like her prey as Tracy mo kill.

Cathy felt Tracy's hand snake into her hair and suddenly pulled her head back. Tracy knew sensitive neck and now her mouth was on it.

"Ohhh… " Cathy moaned.

Tracy's other hand fell to Cathy's ass and pulled her closer as she hungrily sucked her neck

"Ohh…. " Cathy moaned. "Tracy… " Cathy lost all her resistance. She had never been so tu and now she didn't care what people thought. She did not want this to stop, ever.

Tracy was in full control of the situation and the seduction of Cathy was sending her own aro heights "You like this don't you?" Tracy whispered in her ear. Cathy only moaned. Still holdi moved to her ear licking and sucking on Cathy.

Tracy finally released her hair but moved back to her sensitive neck. Her hands slid down he

The Wisdom of Samadhi

In the training of the mind there is the need to develop wisdom. Unfortunately, this cannot be done directly, just by wanting wisdom. There may be some people with innate wisdom, but they will not be able to bring it out and use it properly, unless there is enough mindfulness to support and control it. Wisdom does not simply mean intellectual thought, it is of quite a different order and can only arise from an internal state of calm. Therefore, the first necessity of mental training is to attain a state of calm.

Samadhi, the state of calm attained by meditation practice, has many levels depending on the degree of absorption of the citta with the object of meditation. The word, citta, means the mind, heart or consciousness; it is the basis in a person which is 'central', whereas everything else, including the five khandas is peripheral. Practically everyone has to develop the practice of samadhi, if they want to attain wisdom and a state of happiness beyond what is normally possible in this world. Having attained samadhi, the way is then clear for the development of wisdom.

Developing samadhi can be put like this. Normally, the heart is hungry, it wants something, and it is searching around all the time. The only way it knows how to search is through the senses and in the world, because this is what it has learnt. It wants this, searches for that, looks for this, wants to hear that - and so on, all the time. It goes out continually, but what it gets from the world and what it gets by doing this never satisfies the hunger. In fact it tends to increase it if anything. The heart is still hungry after all the searching one has done.

Now the way to satisfy the heart is not by going out, but by going in the opposite direction. One must withdraw one's attention away from sense stimuli, memory and thoughts - both discursive and playful – and one must give the mind as little as possible to hold onto. One allows one's attention to remain only with the subject of meditation, such as the repetition of "Buddho", or watching one's breathing. The mind is given only this one thing to hold onto, one anchor.

At first it is very difficult for the mind still wanders and jumps about but, as one goes on, it becomes more used to it and interest starts to arise. When interest arises there is less tendency to run around. You have probably noticed this with work; how, when you had something which at first you did not want to do, when you got deeply into it the work started to become interesting. After that, it was no longer such a hard task. It was much easier and could be done without much hardship.

Atomic bombs don't let themselves off, they require people to do so; bullets are not fired from guns without people behind them; and what is behind each person is his own kilesas all the time.

It's like that with meditation practice. At first it's hard work, but once you get into it then interest arises and, once that happens, the mind becomes more and more absorbed in the practice. When it becomes absorbed, the external things all start dropping away automatically. The mind goes right inward, and when it goes inward and stays there, it gets complete rest and the heart is fulfilled internally and feels quite satisfied. When it comes out of that state, it no longer wants to search around looking for things, because it is satisfied. It is prepared to remain just there - still.

Withdrawing from this state of absorption the mind is replete, satisfied, as though it has had a good meal. It is also wieldy and pliable; this state can be turned to good advantage by developing wisdom, because the main obstacles to its development are quelled for a time. Instead of being restless, fluctuating and wandering, the mind is in a suitable state which can be used for investigation, and it can go very, very deep. This is true wisdom and this wisdom brings results.

In the normal way of life, it is possible for one to have insight and gain a lot of understanding by using reason and discursive thought. Sometimes one may feel that such insights are deep and important, for they may reveal things about life and people which one had never realised before. Yet when one reviews that understanding, it does not really have much effect on oneself internally; it is, so to speak, on the surface. It may be quite true, but it does not alter one's outlook or nature.

To give an illustration: the type of understanding that does alter one's nature is like that of a young child who sees something hot, like a red hot coal, and he goes to pick it up. Once he touches it, he never does it again. He learns quickly and deeply - it penetrates, it is effective. That sort of wisdom is not easily lost. However, the wisdom which we must work for is of a much more subtle nature, and can only be attained when we have a basis of Samadhi. In Samadhi, the heart is still, it's open, and whatever is penetrated by wisdom will go straight into it.

Normally, the heart is covered over with all sorts of garbage as though it's wrapped up and nothing can get through, but when samadhi is developed the heart can be reached quite easily. It is quite open, and whatever wisdom is developed goes right in. That wisdom is then effective in giving results. It can be effective in quite extraordinary ways - it can even reverse long-standing habits of people quite easily.
Those obstructive qualities, which are like "sand in the gears", are called kilesas or defilements. They wrap around the heart and prevent the calm from penetrating. They are the things which we have to try and get rid of, and they are the things which we must come to know. Mainly, they consist of greed, hatred and delusion, but there are a whole heap of other things which spring from these three. They have endless ramifications and endless tricks too, they trick us in all sorts of ways.

Let me give an example: when doing meditation practice and a thought arises - something not very good - one might catch it, and then think, "I've caught that one, the kilesas didn't get me there." So then one congratulates oneself, but while congratulating oneself one does not realise that this is also kilesa, and one has been caught in another direction!

These are the sort of tricks that they play all the time. One must learn their tricks and be up to them all the time with understanding. One must not think that these kilesas are little things, which are just tacked onto oneself somehow. They are extremely important and are very deep in the heart. It is just these kilesas that cause all the trouble in the world - nothing else. Atomic bombs don't let themselves off, they require people to do so; bullets are not fired from guns without people behind them; and what is behind each person is his own kilesas all the time.

So the whole trouble in the world springs from these kilesas, which are quite subtle, extremely resourceful and ever-present. They are resourceful because they dwell there in each person's own heart (or citta), which they usurp. They use its inherent cleverness to further their own ends.

The kilesas are there in the heart, and Dhamma is there also, all mixed up; it depends on circumstances which one dominates at any one time. These kilesas are there in the heart all the time, and so they are continually flowing out and displaying themselves in action, speech and thought. In fact, we could say that the average person is almost entirely the kilesas. It is not that sometimes they are there and sometimes they are not - they are there all the time, colouring our outlook, causing our understanding to be deluded. Our basic perceptions of the world, other people, ourselves, religion and endless other things are all distorted, because they all come under the baneful influence of kilesas.

For this reason, everything that we do in ordinary life is to some extent, false or wrong. There is nothing that we can do perfectly, until we get rid of the kilesas. However, we must not be too worried about this because, although everything we do is false, there are two ways in which we can go; there is one way that is wrong, and another that is right. What we must learn is how always to choose the right direction, even though it may be far from perfect and coloured by these kilesas.

If we go in the right direction, the kilesas steadily get thinner, and the understanding that undermines them gets stronger. However, if we go in the wrong direction, we become more deluded and more caught up until there is no hope in anything. You only need to look and see people who do bad things and see what they become. They become coarse and gross, and they don't understand anything subtle at all. This is because their kilesas are growing fast, because they are going in the wrong direction all the time. Those people who go in the right direction gain happiness, as if there was an aura of happiness around them all the time. They are not concerned about things, and they don't worry like other people do. The world to them is not an unpleasant place; all the problems in it do not really touch them, because they are good inside. This is because the troubles in the world are always troubles in oneself, while external troubles are mere occurrences which just take place. It is within one's own internal state that all troubles exist and, if one can only learn to cure oneself, all troubles and problems will recede into the background.

As to the details of what you should do, you know already what is meant by meditation practice, and you should try to maintain whichever technique you find works best. As far as wisdom is concerned, it is good to use wisdom in the sense of thinking about things, seeing how things work in the world and in one's life. Steadily this does have an effect, although it is slow and takes a long time to penetrate deeply. In other words, thinking about the right kind of things in the ordinary way of thinking can develop wisdom but only very slowly, for it takes a long time to penetrate internally in depth. Generally speaking, there is little alternative to the development of Samadhi.

Working Late, Again (More late night fun. This time I had a plan, I thought) stood motionless for a few seconds waiting to see if his mother reacted at all.

"Thanks sweetie." Amanda said releasing her grip on Ryan's pajamas.

As drunk as she was Amanda didn't know exactly where she was, let alone that she'd almos to walk upstairs and made no effort to pull her dress down.

Back in the present, the Schaffer clan had been driving for the better part of the day. Ryan a

"Oh man, this is gonna rock!" Ryan exclaimed.

"I thought you'd approve kiddo." Don said looking at his son in the rear view mirror.

"Man, look at all the cool places to go. " Ryan said as his eyes surveyed the surroundings.

"Yeah, I thought this year instead of spending a day in a few different places we could spend somewhere with enough stuff to keep us entertained. " Don said.

"Sounds good to me dad, I can't wait." Ryan replied.

"What's all the commotion for?" Amanda asked as she awoke.

"Check it out mom! We're in Las Vegas." Ryan said shaking his mother's shoulders.

"Well I'll be...Don, this is a wonderful idea." Amanda said.

"Alright, now that everybody's awake I guess it's time to get us a room and see what Vegas said pulling off the road at a very nice hotel.

Don went inside and paid for two rooms for the week. The rooms were on the top floor and v hall from each other. Don figured that if they were going to be staying a week his son would own room. Besides, if his wife got a few drinks in her, they were gonna need their own room

"Oh sweet, I gotta check that out." Ryan said as he looked down from his window at the hote

Don was in his room looking through a brochure at all the gambling spots. He was an avid g thrill of it. Amanda was in the bathroom freshening up. She was looking forward to a night of partying. After a bit Don heard a knock on his door. He opened it to see his son standing the with a towel draped over his shoulder.

"Seen the pool huh?" Don smiled.

"Yeah, I'm gonna go check it out. What are you two gonna do?" Ryan asked.

"Well I don't know about your mother but I'm going to go downstairs and see if I can lose so laughed.

"Well, alright then, I'll be back later." Ryan said.

Downstairs Ryan jumped into the pool and started to unwind and enjoy his vacation. There can't we?" Don said never taking his eyes off the brochure.

"I guess so, but what am I supposed to do while you blow our money. You know how much

"This is Vegas honey; you can pretty much do whatever you want." Don said standing up.

"I guess so." Amanda pouted.

"Listen, I'll call you in a couple hours or so and we can get Ryan and go get something to ea any trouble now; I'll only bail you out once." Don laughed as he walked out the door.

Amanda thumbed through the brochures looking for something to do but came up empty. It dancing. She walked over to the window and saw the pool downstairs.

"Well, I could always work on my tan." She said.

Downstairs in the pool Ryan was having a blast. He'd started talking to a couple guys about very much. While he was waiting for the other team to serve the ball Ryan was looking arou saw something that drew his undivided attention.

"Oh boy." Ryan said as he saw his mother walking toward the pool.

The fact that Amanda was wearing a white bikini didn't help matters at all. Amanda didn't se pool as she went about putting her towel on a lounge chair. She laid down onto the chair an tan lotion on her legs as she looked around.

"Hey man, you still with us?" One of the guys Ryan had been talking too asked noticing he w attention to the game.

He followed Ryan's line of sight and saw what had his undivided attention. There was a well lathering herself up.

"Damn, maybe I should ask if she needs any help." The guy said.

Ryan debated telling his new friend that the woman was his mother. He thought that he migl

Amanda didn't know the young man was talking to her at first but she turned her head slight contact. Immediately she blushed. She couldn't believe this kid was hitting on her. She peek her sun glasses at this young boy who couldn't be much older than her son. He was very cu awhile since Amanda's ego had been stroked.

"Umm...thanks." Was all she could muster at the moment.

"My names Chris, nice to meet you." He said.

"I'm Amanda, nice to meet you too." Amanda smiled.

"So are you here on vacation?" Chris asked.

"Yeah, I guess I've got that tourist look huh?" Amanda replied.

"Nah, if all the tourists looked like you I wouldn't mind them so much." Chris smiled.

Amanda smiled at Chris's comment. He was obviously flirting with her and she liked it.

"Thanks, that's sweet of you to say." Amanda said blushing.

"Hey I noticed you putting on some sun tan lotion earlier. Would you mind helping me out, I

"Umm...sure." Amanda answered.

Chris slid his lounger over close to Amanda's and turned his back to her. Amanda didn't kno "Sound like a plan man, but how do you know all this stuff?" Chris asked.

"I read it somewhere I think." Ryan replied.

Amanda was starting to relax in the warm sun. This vacation was just what she needed. Als going to ignore her then maybe Chris could keep her entertained.

"Here ya go." Chris said as he plopped back down on his chair.

Amanda took a big drink and then laid her head back down. Chris sat there a few minutes b

"Really? I was down by the pool for a few minutes. I didn't see you anywhere." Amanda said "I was playing volleyball, I didn't see you though. How long were you down there?" Ryan ask

"Oh, only about five minutes." Amanda lied very relieved.

Ryan smiled to himself as he heard his mother's lie. She didn't want anyone to know she'd b fun with a young stranger.

"Well, I just wanted to know what you and dad were going to do later." Ryan said.

"He told me to call him earlier and we'd all go get something to eat. After that I'm going to hit floors." Amanda said.

"That's cool. Just let me know when you two are ready." Ryan said getting up.

"Ok honey, see you in a bit." Amanda replied.

Ryan walked back to his room and watched some TV for a while. After forty-five minutes or s on his door. He got up and opened the door to find his mom and dad standing there. His dad jacket and slacks and his mother had on a very tight little black cocktail dress. From the look planned on a night of partying.

"You ready to go kiddo?" Don asked his son.

"Sure am, let me grab my wallet." Ryan said.

The three of them rode the elevator down to the lobby and caught a cab to a nice restaurant and enjoyed their meal. Then they decided to go to this nightclub across the street. When th I'll be able to pry your mother off the dance floor." Don laughed.

"Yeah I see what you mean." Ryan replied looking at his mother still shaking her ass with no

About an hour later Ryan had just gotten the blonde's number and walked her out to her car in he saw his dad sitting at the bar with his head down. Ryan knew he'd had enough for toni saw his mother coming out of the bathroom.

"Hey mom! I don't think dad's gonna make much longer." Ryan shouted to be heard over the "Yeah, he said he was tired from driving all day." Amanda said still shaking her hips to the b music.

"So are you guys ready to call it a night?" Ryan asked.

"Oh honey, I'm just warming up." Amanda replied.

"What about dad though, he's through." Ryan smiled.

"Honey, do me a favor and see if you can't get your father back to the hotel safely. I'll take a Amanda said.

Ryan wasn't thrilled with the idea of leaving his mother alone at the club but he was tired too see there was no arguing with her.

"Are you sure?" He asked.

"Definitely, I'll see you tomorrow sweetie." Amanda said before she kissed her son on the ch

Ryan smiled and watched his mother's ass as she walked back to the dance floor. He then w dad out of the club and into a cab. On the ride home his dad didn't even ask about his wife, When they got back to the hotel Don could hardly walk. Ryan managed to get him into the e but in the hallway outside their rooms Don passed out in the floor. Ryan couldn't help but lau when he tried to pick his dad up he realized how heavy an unconscious body was. He used his room up so he could set his wallet and his dad's coat down. That way he would have bot up his dad. He bent down and gently slapped his dad a couple times trying to wake him up. Don's eyes popped open.

"Dad! C'mon you've gotta make it to your bed." Ryan said standing his father up.

"Yeah yeah kiddo.....no problem." Don said staggering back and forth.

The only problem was that Don was so drunk he headed for the only open door he could se Ryan's room and quickly fell across the end of Ryan's bed.

"No dad, that's the wrong room!" Ryan yelled but it was too late.

Too tired and drunk to try and pick up his dad Ryan grabbed Don's key card from his back p door. His plan was to wait for his mom to come back and tell her that Don had passed out in the night they'd have to switch rooms. But after about twenty minutes Ryan had passed out

Three hours later Amanda Schaffer got off the elevator and stumbled to her room. To put it r parent's room. He looked down at the foot of the bed and saw his mother stumble by. Just a say something his mother stopped at the bathroom door and pulled her dress down to her a up like pie plates. Before him now his mother was naked except for a black thong.

"Oh shit." Ryan thought as his mother closed the door.

Ryan laid there in the dark with his heart beating like crazy. In just a few minutes his drunke going to come out of the bathroom and get into bed with him laying in it. He knew he should the lights on and tell her what had happened but he couldn't help but want to see what woul didn't. In the worst case scenario he could just pretend he was passed out. Just then the bat and the light went out. Ryan was now safe in complete darkness.

Amanda felt her way to the bed and pulled the covers back. She lied down and snuggle up t her husband. Amanda was drunk and horny, she thought that maybe if she tried she could s they could have some drunken sex.

"Hey baby, are you awake?" She said gently kissing Ryan's neck.

Ryan was trying not to hyperventilate as his mother kissed his neck. He wasn't too worried a anything because he was built very much like his father. The only difference was that he had hair on his head. Not knowing what to do he simply grunted. "Ummhmmm"

"Oh baby, I'm so wet right now." Amanda moaned as she kissed her way up Ryan's neck.

Amanda tilted her son's head toward her and pressed her lips against his. In her drunken sta anything was amiss. Ryan was in heaven, he was kissing his mother finally. It was wrong bu the moment. Daringly Ryan reached over with his hand and groped his mother's tit. Amanda

"Oh godddd....."Ryan quietly moaned.

Amanda's lips once again found her son's and her tongue danced with his as she jacked his minutes she got up and in the darkness Ryan couldn't tell what she was doing. Then the mo he'd ever felt happened as a warm wetness engulfed his cock.

"OH MY GOD!!!" Ryan thought as his own mother sucked his cock.

Amanda rarely gave her husband a blowjob but since he'd managed to get it up that well sh

"Oh god!" Ryan hissed doing his best to disguise his voice.

He knew he could ruin the whole thing buy cumming in his mother's mouth without warning couldn't resist. He wouldn't be able to live with himself if he didn't do it. Amanda felt the cock mouth began to swell and she knew her husband was about to cum. Part of her hoped he w longer because she could really use a good fucking but another part of her was in the giving bucked uncontrollably as his cock erupted into his mother's mouth.

"FUUUUUUUUCKKKK!!!" Ryan moaned deeply.

Amanda sucked harder and harder being careful not to let any cum go to waste. Normally sw a little sick but as drunk as she was it went down easily. Even after she'd milked her son's ha its cream she still sucked. Finally relenting Ryan's cock slipped from his mother's mouth with "God baby, that was hot." Amanda said running her finger nails down her son's thighs.

It usually took her husband at least an hour to recover but to her amazement when her hand cock it was still rock hard.

"Oh baby, gimme that cock!" Amanda moaned as she straddled her son.

Ryan couldn't even speak he was so drained from his orgasm. He laid there amazed that an happening. He felt his mother grab his cock and guide it to her pussy. In one slow motion An her son's cock. Her eyes rolled back into her head as her son's cock penetrated her pussy d remembered ever being penetrated before.

"Oh fuck baby! God what's gotten into you?" She moaned.

Slowly but surely Amanda increased the pace as she rode her son. Ryan reached up into th squeezed his mother tits together. All that could be heard was the sound of Amanda's ass sl son's hips. After ten minutes or so Ryan rolled on top of his mother and kissed her deeply as her wet pussy. Amanda was in pure ecstasy, her toes curled as she felt her orgasm building

"C'mon baby, fuck me harder!" She groaned.

Ryan took her cue and began to pound her harder and harder. He raised her legs to her che his mother as hard and as fast as he could. It only took a couple of minutes before he knew

ZAZEN AND CHRISTIANITY

by Koun Yamada Roshi

This text addresses some of the most fundamental and delicate religious issues. Therefore, it should be read, quoted and analysed in a mindful way.

Copyrights (c) by Koun Yamada and Sydney Zen Center 251 Young St., Annandale, Sydney, NSW 2038, Australia.

(Yamada Roshi [Mar 1907-13 Sep 1989] was a successor of Hakuun Yasutani Roshi and a teacher of Robert Aitken Roshi. His zendo is in Kamakura, Japan, where he taught a number of westerners, including many Catholic priests and nuns. This particular talk was given by him to a group of Catholics in Kamakura in 1975. This document was scanned from an un-referenced 2-page typed manuscript in the collection of the Sydney Zen Center.)

I am often asked by Christians, especially Catholics, whether they can practice zazen and still preserve the beliefs of Christianity. To that question I usually answer that Zen is not a religion in the same sense that Christianity is a religion. There is no reason, therefore, why Christianity and zazen cannot co-exist.

Almost all Buddhist sects can be called religions. Zazen, however, is quite different in this respect. Quite simply, it is the core of all Buddhist sects. As you know, there are many sects in Buddhism, but the core or essence of them all is the experience called satori or self-realization. The theories and philosophies of all the sects are but the clothing covering the core. These outer wrappings are of various shapes and colors, but what is inside remains the same. And the core, this experience, is not adorned with any thought or philosophy. It is merely a fact, an experienced fact, in the same way that the taste of tea is a fact. A cup of tea has no thought, no idea, no philosophy. It tastes the same to Buddhists as it does to Christians. There is no difference at all.

You may ask what makes this experience happen. Well, quite simply, it is when certain conditions are present to the consciousness of a human being, and a reaction occurs. This reaction we call the Zen experience. The reaction of this experience is always the same, regardless of the beliefs we may hold or the color of our skin. It could be compared to playing billiards. When we hit the balls with the same amount of power and in the same direction, all the balls roll along the same course and at the same angles, regardless of their color.

Now you may ask, what are the conditions that bring our consciousness to the experience? It is to concentrate with our mind in one-pointedness, and to forget ourselves in it. The one-pointedness is achieved sometimes in breath-counting, sometimes in what call, "following the breath", sometimes, in "just sitting", and sometimes working on koans. You will notice that all these ways point inwardly. It is a very interesting fact, but when we concentrate on an object outside ourselves, for example, as in archery where we aim at a target, no matter how strong the concentration may be, we cannot attain the Zen experience. So in Zen practice, when we want to attain satori, we have to be absorbed inwardly.

Here you must remember that the experience attained by zazen practice is not a thought or a philosophy or a religion, but merely a fact, a happening. And strange as it may seem, the experience of that fact has the power to free us from the agonies of the pains of the world. It emancipates us from the anxiety of all worldly sufferings. No one knows why that experience has such wonderful power, but it does. This is the most important point, and it's the most difficult to try to explain.

In the Zen experience, a certain unity happens, subject and object become one, and we come to realize our own self-nature. This self-nature cannot be seen, it cannot be touched, it cannot be heard. Because of these characteristics we refer to it as 'empty' - (in Japanese, 'ku') - but its activities are infinite. So we say the Zen experience is the realization of the empty-infinitude of our self-nature or our essential nature, as it is often called.

When this happens, the fact is accompanied by a great peace of mind. At that moment, we feel as thought the heavy burdens we have been carrying in our head and on our shoulders, indeed all over our body and soul, suddenly disappear as if thrown away. The joy and happiness at that time are beyond all words. And there are no philosophies or theologies attached to this experience.

Should such a fact be called a religion? I don't think so. It is called satori, or self-realization or enlightenment. Catholics are attaining the satori experience here in this zendo. I feel that in the future, they should do research into the meaning of the fact of satori from the Christian's point of view. (This should be the work of Catholics, not mine.)

Having discovered this new world, the Zen student must learn that it is essentially one with the phenomenal world we all know so well.

Regarding the relation between Christianity and Zen, I think it can be thought of as two highways, going in separate paths, but crossing at an interchange. The two roads may seem quite apart, but where they cross is common ground. Now, if we take Zen as a religion, Christianity and Zen do seem to be quite different. But their teachings have as their interchange a common area which belongs to both. m at is the area of religious experience. I'm sure that a lot of words and phrases in the Bible could never have been uttered outside of a true religious experience. That, it seems to me, is not irrelevant to the satori experience in Zen.

What are we going to attain by doing zazen? There are three categories: 1) Developing concentration of the mind. 2) Satori-awakening, enlightenment. 3) Personalization of satori.

The first, to develop concentration, is of utmost importance in establishing and maintaining a successful life in this world. The ability to concentrate calms the surface of our consciousness. This is most necessary in making correct decisions and for receiving external impressions and information in the right way. Also, when the mind is deeply absorbed, it does not easily yield to the influence of external circumstances. And, moreover, when we want to actualize ideas which arise in our heart, or when we want to accomplish some work or business, a strong concentration of mind is indispensable. The second, satori, is the most important to a Mahayana Zen Buddhist. Dogen Zenji, the great Zen master who brought Soto Zen to Japan, has clearly stated that without enlightenment there is no Zen. This satori does not happen necessarily by mere concentration. Our life problem of life-and-death, cannot be solved fundamentally by concentration. It can only be resolved by enlightenment and the personalization of that experience. If we want to free ourselves of the anxiety of the sufferings of life through zazen, the satori experience should be our main purpose for practicing zazen. Dogen Zenji has told us that we should pray for the help of Buddhas and Patriarchs. This resembles Christianity's prayers for intercession.

The third aim of zazen, the personalization or embodiment of satori, comes as a matter of course only after having attained satori. To attain this experience of enlightenment is not very difficult. For some people, only one sesshin is necessary. But to accomplish our ultimate personality is very difficult indeed, and requires an extremely long period of time. The experience itself is only the entrance. The completion is to personalize what we came to realize in the experience. After washing away all the ecstasy and glitter of the experience, the truly great Zen person is not distinguishable in outward appearance. He is a man who has experienced deep enlightenment and consequently extinguished all illusions, but is still not different externally from an ordinary man.

Through satori and zazen, you should not become a strange person, not an eccentric or an esoteric person. You should become a normal person, a real person and, as far as is possible, a perfect human being. I think the truly great Christian is not much different.

literatures of SakyaTibetan Buddhism. It generally covers esoteric teachings ofMahnuttara and Hevajra Tantra. The Lamdre literature is not onlythe greatest historical evidence of the the greatest gift of itsmasters. Whil.e exact dates of the Indian masters are not easy to det

In spite of the inclusion of theLamdre works by the Five Masters in their collected works, the of both traditions.The emergence of this thirty one volume Sakya Lamdre Literature Series is new phenomenon in the history of Lamdre texts. We may hope thatthis edition can be enlar the near future. It amalgamatestshogs bad, slob bad, the eleven commentaries by Sachen manyother works related to Lamdre. It was edited by His Holiness Sakya Trizin forits public by Sakya Centre, Dehra Dun in 1983. His Holinessexplains the model of his edition in the p bibiography. It ispublished in the traditional folio style [dpe gzugs] or loose leafs whichrequir
